

Palgrave Series in Asian German Studies

Series Editors

Joanne Miyang Cho

Department of History

William Paterson University of New Jersey

Wayne, NJ, USA

Lee M. Roberts

International Language Culture Studies Department

Indiana University-Purdue University

Fort Wayne, IN, USA

This series contributes to the emerging field of Asian-German Studies by bringing together cutting-edge scholarship from international scholars in a variety of fields. It encourages the publication of works by specialists globally on the multi-faceted dimensions of ties between the German-speaking world (Germany, Austria, Switzerland, and German-speaking enclaves in Eastern Europe) and Asian countries over the past two centuries. Rejecting traditional notions of West and East as seeming polar opposites (e.g., colonizer and colonized), the volumes in this series attempt to reconstruct the ways in which Germans and Asians have cooperated and negotiated the challenge of modernity in various fields. The volumes cover a range of topics that combine the perspectives of anthropology, comparative religion, economics, geography, history, human rights, literature, philosophy, politics, and more. For the first time, such publications offer readers a unique look at the role that the German-speaking world and Asia have played in developing what is today a unique relationship between two of the world's currently most vibrant political and economic regions.

More information about this series at <http://www.palgrave.com/gp/series/14664>

Sebastian Musch

Jewish Encounters with Buddhism in German Culture

Between Moses and Buddha, 1890–1940

palgrave
macmillan

Sebastian Musch
Department of History
Osnabrück University
Osnabrück, Germany

Palgrave Series in Asian German Studies
ISBN 978-3-030-27468-9 ISBN 978-3-030-27469-6 (eBook)
<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-030-27469-6>

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s), under exclusive licence to Springer Nature Switzerland AG 2019

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use. The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Cover illustration: AF Fotografie / Alamy Stock Photo

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Switzerland AG.

The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

This book is based on a dissertation at the Hochschule für Jüdische Studien Heidelberg under the title “Jewish Orientalism? Jewish Responses to Buddhism in German Culture (1890–1940)”

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The completion of this book has been a long journey spanning almost six years and three continents. I'm extremely grateful for the friends and colleagues, who made this journey possible. First of all, I want to thank Frederek Musall, who initially suggested this topic to me. Without his constant encouragement and unwavering support, this book would not have materialized. I also want to thank Gregor Ahn for agreeing to serve as my second reader.

A special thanks goes to Cedric Cohen-Skalli for hosting me at the University of Haifa. He provided guidance when I needed it the most and I'm thankful for his unfailing scholarly support and friendship.

I'm particularly grateful to everybody from the Posen Society of Fellows. The two summer seminars in Berkeley have been a wonderful occasion to discuss my work in an intellectually stimulating as well as pleasant setting. I'm indebted to Rachel and David Biale, Naomi Seidman, Fania Oz-Salzberger, and David Myers for organizing these seminars and the erudite discussion of my research.

Martin Jay invited me to spend the academic year 2015–2016 in the History Department at University of California (UC) Berkeley and I am grateful for his support and advice. Rachel and David Biale were crucial in making me feel at home in Berkeley. I further want to thank Naomi Seidman for inviting me to the Dissertation Writing Group at the Graduate Theological Union, where I wrote substantial parts of Chap. 4.

Susannah Heschel invited me to Dartmouth College where I spent a wonderful summer in 2016. I want to thank her for this invitation and her continuing support ever since.

I'm also indebted to the following persons, who were so generous to offer their advice (in more or less chronological order): Guy Stroumsa, Amos Morris-Reich, Yotam Hotam, Boaz Neumann, (z"l), Zur Shalev, Ory Amitai, Paul Mendes-Flohr, Andrea Sinn, Russell Berman, and Lawrence Baron.

I have presented parts of this work at the following institutions and am particularly grateful for the enthusiasm and interested questions I received from the audience (again in more or less chronological order): University of Haifa, Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, University of Helsinki, University of Heidelberg, University of Frankfurt, Mahachulalongkornrajavidyalaya University, University of Oxford, University of Southern California, Harvard University, Dartmouth College, and University of British Columbia.

The staff at the following archives has gone out of its way to help me with my research: the Center for Jewish History New York, the Feuchtwanger Memorial Library at the University of Southern California, the Wrocław University Library, and, last but not least, Deutsches Literaturarchiv Marbach.

I want to acknowledge the generosity of the following organizations and foundations: EDEN-Project (Horizon 2020), the Posen Foundation, the Association of Jewish Studies, the Feuchtwanger Memorial Library at the University of Southern California, the Jewish Studies Program at Dartmouth College, and Deutsches Literaturarchiv Marbach (C.H. Beck Graduiertenstipendium).

A semester as a guest lecturer at Uva Wellassa University in Sri Lanka and a month at Shengshou Temple, China, as part of the Woodenfish Humanistic Buddhism Monastic Life Program offered me insights into Buddhism beyond what one can learn from texts.

A special acknowledgment goes to my new colleagues in the Department of History and the Institute for Migration Research and Intercultural Studies (IMIS) at Osnabrück University.

Most of all, I want to thank my parents for their endless trust, and Bieke Willem, for being my travel companion on this journey.

CONTENTS

| | | |
|----------|--|------------|
| 1 | Introduction | 1 |
| 2 | Buddhism and German-Jewish Orientalism | 19 |
| 3 | The Buddha, the Rabbis, and the Philosophers: Rejections and Defenses | 41 |
| 4 | The Bridgebuilders: Jewishness Between Asia and Europe | 101 |
| 5 | The Assimilation and Dissimilation of a Buddhist Jew: Walter Tausk's Contested Identities | 189 |
| 6 | Conclusion: Toward the Study of Jewish-Buddhist Relations | 245 |
| | Bibliography | 255 |
| | Index | 281 |