

Classifying Elections in Britain

Christopher Kirkland

Classifying Elections in Britain

palgrave
macmillan

Christopher Kirkland
School of Humanities, Religion and Philosophy
York St John University
York, UK

ISBN 978-3-030-32555-8      ISBN 978-3-030-32556-5 (eBook)
<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-030-32556-5>

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2020, corrected publication 2020

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use. The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, expressed or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Cover illustration: © John Rawsterne/patternhead.com

This Palgrave Pivot imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Switzerland AG
The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

PREFACE

The ideas behind this book stemmed from the South Yorkshire 2014 Police and Crime Commissioner by-election. In many ways this election felt different from others. After the media circus over the Rotherham child abuse scandal and the very public resignation of the incumbent PCC, Shaun Wright, the lack of media attention placed upon finding Wright's successor was noticeable for its absence.

Akin to this the campaign felt markedly different. There was a noticeable lack of campaign literature and at the start of the campaign the Liberal Democrats—Britain's third-largest party and the junior coalition partners in national government—publicly denounced the elections and refused to stand a candidate. Such a public denouncement of a policy that the party helped to pass just three years earlier as part of the coalition government seemed remarkable. Yet this did not get the same publicity/attention as other U-turns (for example over tuition fees).

The question “who cares” is one that is often misused to denote anger or frustration at the convergence of the UK's main two parties upon the centre ground. Yet within this election the same question could aptly be asked in a literal sense. In the case of the PCC election it was not just large parts of the electorate that seemed not to care (or to care less than in other elections) but also some political parties and the media. This encouraged me to ask to what extent do different actors engage with (or care about) different elections? And how can we understand or conceptualise such differences in the levels of salience that are offered to elections? The book offers a methodological approach to answer these questions.

Elements and ideas of this book have developed over the five years since the 2014 by-election. I have been fortunate to receive advice on this project and elements within it from colleagues who have been generous with their time and comments. In particular I would like to thank Justin Fisher, Toby James and Stuart Wilks-Heeg and an anonymous reviewer for their help and advice on the designing and implementation of this study. Whilst these comments helped shape the methodology of the book any errors in its design or implementation are mine alone.

York, UK

Christopher Kirkland

CONTENTS

|          |   |    |
|----------|---|----|
| 1 | Introduction   | 1  |
|          | Understanding British Elections                            | 1  |
|          | First- and Second-Order Elections                          | 5  |
|          | Other Views of British Elections                           | 8  |
|          | First- and Second-Order Elections in a Comparative Context | 13 |
|          | Conclusions  | 16 |
|          | References   | 18 |
| 2 | New Approach   | 21 |
|          | Elections as Non-static Entities                           | 24 |
|          | Changing the Nature of Elections                           | 25 |
|          | Conceptualising Elections                                  | 27 |
|          | Voters   | 27 |
|          | Political Parties  | 30 |
|          | The Media  | 32 |
|          | Conclusion   | 34 |
|          | References   | 36 |
| 3 | Turnout  | 39 |
|          | Voters as Rational Actors                                  | 42 |
|          | Less at Stake  | 43 |
|          | Case Study I: The General Election of 2001                 | 47 |
|          | Case Study II: European Elections                          | 49 |

|          |   |     |
|----------|---|-----|
|          | Description of Turnout of Different Types of Elections | 51  |
|          | Turnout as Results of Elections                        | 52  |
|          | References   | 54  |
| 4 | Political Parties                                      | 57  |
|          | Defining Political Parties                             | 58  |
|          | Case Study I: Devolved Elections                       | 60  |
|          | Case Study II: PCC Elections and By-Elections          | 64  |
|          | Measuring Political Party's Salience of Elections      | 66  |
|          | Calculating Party Spending                             | 68  |
|          | Party and Voter Perceptions of Elections               | 70  |
|          | Conclusions  | 72  |
|          | References   | 73  |
| 5 | The Media  | 75  |
|          | Case Study I: Police and Crime Commissioner Elections  | 80  |
|          | Case Study II: The 2019 Local Elections                | 82  |
|          | Media Reporting of Elections                           | 84  |
|          | References   | 88  |
| 6 | Conclusions  | 93  |
|          | Beyond First- and Second-Order                         | 93  |
|          | Further Considerations                                 | 98  |
|          | Conclusions  | 100 |
|          | References   | 101 |
|          | Correction to: Political Parties                       | C1  |
|          | Appendix: Elections and Voters                         | 103 |
|          | Index  | 105 |

LIST OF FIGURES

|          |   |    |
|----------|---|----|
| Fig. 3.1 | Turnout in selected elections 1979–2017                         | 41 |
| Fig. 3.2 | Turnout in selected UK elections, 2004–2017                     | 52 |
| Fig. 4.1 | Political party spending in the 2015 general election           | 61 |
| Fig. 4.2 | SNP spending in various elections                               | 62 |
| Fig. 4.3 | Spending in various NI elections                                | 63 |
| Fig. 4.4 | Spending in elections by effective number of parties            | 69 |
| Fig. 4.5 | Saliency of elections as measured by party spending and turnout | 71 |
| Fig. 5.1 | Media coverage of selected elections, 2019–2012                 | 85 |
| Fig. 5.2 | Newspaper coverage of selected elections, 2010–2019             | 86 |
| Fig. 6.1 | Saliency of selected elections, 2010–2017                       | 96 |