

Forests in International Law

Anja Eikermann

Forests in International Law

Is There Really a Need for an International Forest Convention?

 Springer

Anja Eikermann
Faculty of Law
Georg-August-University Göttingen
Göttingen, Germany

ISBN 978-3-319-14949-3 ISBN 978-3-319-14950-9 (eBook)
DOI 10.1007/978-3-319-14950-9

Library of Congress Control Number: 2015931641

Springer Cham Heidelberg New York Dordrecht London
© Springer International Publishing Switzerland 2015

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are reserved by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made.

Printed on acid-free paper

Springer International Publishing AG Switzerland is part of Springer Science+Business Media
(www.springer.com)

Acknowledgements

This book could not have been written without the support of many people. First and foremost, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to Prof. Dr. Peter-Tobias Stoll for encouragement and trust, constructive conversations, inspiring thoughts and for continuously providing opportunities for professional and personal development. Furthermore, I am particularly grateful for the help of Johannes Jürging for reading and commenting on my work with so much analytic expertise and a keen sense of the essential and even more for many conversations. All the members of the Department of International Economic and Environmental Law as well as of the Institute of Public International and European Law of the Göttingen University provide for a pleasant, supportive and constructive working atmosphere. I enjoyed working and studying in this environment throughout all the years, and it builds up the cornerstone of this book.

I would also like to thank Prof. Dr. Nele Matz-Lück and Prof. Dr. Andreas Paulus, as members of my thesis committee, as well as PD Dr. Marcus Schladebach, as second assessor of the thesis, for their generous support.

I was privileged to be a member of the doctoral programme “Biodiversity and Society” under the auspices of the Göttingen Graduate School of Social Sciences. The research for this book was enriched by the work of all the members of the doctoral programme. It would not have been possible without the funding by the Göttingen Graduate School of Social Sciences, financially supported by the state of Lower Saxony (Niedersächsisches Ministerium für Wissenschaft und Kultur). I would like to thank Dr. Bettina Ross, as a representative for the Graduate School, for this invaluable support.

Furthermore, this book benefited immeasurably from the most accurate language check by Katherine Belton. Thank you for your offer and for investing your time. I appreciate it very much.

Finally, without the love, trust and support of my family and friends, this journey would not have reached its destination. In particular, I want to thank Julia Dippel,

Daniel Büttner, Philipp Socha, Henriette Kogelmann and Christian Pontzen, for companionship, a friendly ear and creating a friendship that makes it all worthwhile. Most of all, I want to express my deepest gratitude to my mother and sister, for imperturbable confidence and support, who made everything possible and to whom this book is dedicated.

Contents

1	State of Research and Structure of the Book	1
	References	6
2	The Case for International Forest Regulation: The Benefits and Challenges of the Multifunctional Concept of Forests	9
2.1	International Forest Utilization in History: The Correlation Between Utilization and Conservation	10
2.2	Forest Dimensions: Ecological, Economic and Socio-Political Perspectives and Priorities	14
2.2.1	Forest Functions and Services	15
2.2.2	Provision of Fibre, Fuel, and Non-wood Forest Products . . .	17
2.2.3	Soil and Water Protection	17
2.2.4	Protection of Fragile Ecosystems: Forests in Mountains, Drylands, and Small Islands	18
2.2.5	Conservation of Biodiversity	18
2.2.6	Carbon Sequestration, Climate Change Mitigation	19
2.2.7	Sociocultural Values and Services	19
2.2.8	Economic Value of Forest Services and Functions	20
2.2.9	Complexity and Priorities	21
2.2.10	Interim Conclusions	22
2.3	Threats to Forests and Human Well-Being: Deforestation and Forest Degradation	22
2.4	The Need for International Forest Regulation: Interim Conclusions	27
	References	29
3	Agenda-Setting and Institution Building for Forests: Entangled Structures and the Failure of Legalization	31
3.1	The Evolution of International Forest Processes	32
3.1.1	Regulation for Utilization: The Forest Era Before 1990 . . .	32
3.1.2	Forests on the UN Agenda: The Forest Era from 1990 to 1999	35

3.1.3	Fragmentation Sprouts: The Forest Era from 2000 to 2007	36
3.1.4	Current Forest Processes: Special Focus—Forest Europe . . .	37
3.1.5	Interim Conclusions	39
3.2	A Close-Up View on Institutions: The United Nations Forum on Forests	40
3.2.1	The Development of the UNFF	40
3.2.2	Mandate, Objectives and Purpose	42
3.2.3	Institutional Structure, Membership and Working Modalities	44
3.2.4	Functions	45
3.2.5	Topics	47
3.2.6	Outcomes and Implications for International Forest Regulation	48
3.3	A Close-Up View on Contents: The Forest Principles, Chapter 11 of Agenda 21 and the Non-legally Binding Instrument on All Types of Forests	49
3.3.1	Chapter 11 of Agenda 21 on “Combating Deforestation” . . .	49
3.3.2	The Forest Principles	51
3.3.3	The Non-legally Binding Instrument on All Types of Forests	53
3.3.4	Implications for International Forest Regulation?—Interim Conclusions	56
3.4	Missed Opportunities and Isolated Processes: Interim Conclusions . . .	57
	References	58
4	The Treaty Canopy: International Law Covering Forests	61
4.1	Forests and Various Forms of Trade: CITES, ITTA and the WTO Law	63
4.1.1	Trade and Conservation: Forests in CITES	64
4.1.1.1	General Structure and Contents of the Convention	65
4.1.1.2	CITES and Forests	68
4.1.1.3	Interim Conclusions	70
4.1.2	A Regional Trade Approach: Forests in the International Tropical Timber Regime	71
4.1.2.1	Development and Content of the ITTAs	71
4.1.2.2	The International Tropical Timber Regime	75
4.1.2.3	The ITTR and Conservationist Interests	77
4.1.2.4	Interim Conclusions	78
4.1.3	Trade First: Forests in the WTO Law	78
4.1.3.1	Aims and Relevance of the WTO	79
4.1.3.2	Trade and Environment Within the WTO Regime	80
4.1.3.3	WTO Law and Forests	81
4.1.3.4	Interim Conclusions	81

4.1.4	Relevance of Trade Agreements for Forests: Interim Conclusions	82
4.2	Forests and Nature Conservation and Wildlife Protection: The Ramsar Convention and the World Heritage Convention	83
4.2.1	Wetlands Protection: Forests in the Ramsar Convention	84
4.2.1.1	Scope and Contents of the Convention	84
4.2.1.2	The Ramsar Convention and Forests	88
4.2.1.3	Interim Conclusions	90
4.2.2	Protection of Outstanding Universal Values: Forests Under UNESCO's World Heritage Convention	91
4.2.2.1	Scope and Contents of the World Heritage Convention	91
4.2.2.2	The WHC and Forests	94
4.2.2.3	Interim Conclusions	96
4.2.3	The Limited Listing Approach: Interim Conclusions	97
4.3	Forests and the Rio Conventions: CBD, UNFCCC and UNCCD	98
4.3.1	Forest Biodiversity: Forests in the CBD	99
4.3.1.1	Objectives of the Convention	99
4.3.1.2	Principle and Obligations	100
4.3.1.3	Institutions of the Convention	102
4.3.1.4	The Ecosystem Approach	103
4.3.1.5	The Value of the CBD for Forests	103
4.3.1.6	Interim Conclusions	106
4.3.2	Carbon Sinks: Forests in the UNFCCC and the Kyoto Protocol	107
4.3.2.1	Special Features	108
4.3.2.2	Scope of the Convention	109
4.3.2.3	Objectives of the Convention	109
4.3.2.4	Principles of the Convention	110
4.3.2.5	The Commitments	110
4.3.2.6	Organs and Actors of the Convention	111
4.3.2.7	The Kyoto Protocol	112
4.3.2.8	Forests as Carbon Sinks: Land Use, Land-Use Change and Forestry	115
4.3.2.9	Reductions of Emissions from Deforestation and Forest Degradation (REDD)	121
4.3.2.10	Interim Conclusions	126
4.3.3	Forests for Soil Protection: Forests in the UNCCD	127
4.3.3.1	Scope and Contents of the Convention	127
4.3.3.2	Forests in the UNCCD	129
4.3.3.3	Interim Conclusions	130
4.3.4	The Lack of a Rio Forest Convention: Interim Conclusions	130
4.4	The Value of Indirect International Forests Law: Interim Conclusions	130
	References	131

5	The Options for an International Regulation of Forests	135
5.1	The Ideal Substance for International Forest Regulation	136
5.1.1	No Prioritization: Balancing Forest Conservation and Forest Utilization	136
5.1.2	The Rule of International Law	137
5.1.3	A Common Understanding of “Sustainable Forest Management”	138
5.1.4	Maintaining Sufficient Forest Cover	142
5.1.5	Counter Illegal and Unsustainable Trade	143
5.1.6	Financing	143
5.1.7	Participation, Benefit-Sharing and Compensation	144
5.1.8	Capacity Building	145
5.1.9	Monitoring, Assessment and Reporting	145
5.1.10	Implementation, Enforcement and Compliance Mechanisms	145
5.1.11	Provision of Dialogue Structures	146
5.1.12	Interim Conclusions	146
5.2	Evaluation of the Multi-Instrument-Approach	146
5.2.1	The Political Contents and Structures	147
5.2.2	The Contents of the Indirect International Forest Law and the Implications of Treaty Interrelations	150
5.2.2.1	The Spectrum of Treaty Interrelations	150
5.2.2.2	Treaty Interrelations in Indirect International Forest Law	152
5.2.2.3	Interim Conclusions	156
5.2.3	The Shortcomings of the Multi-Instrument-Approach: Interim Conclusions	157
5.3	The Impact of Fragmentation on the Options for International Forest Regulation: The Metamorphoses of the Concept	158
5.3.1	The Concept of Fragmentation in International Law	159
5.3.2	The Classic Tools of International Law to Manage Treaty Interrelations	161
5.3.3	The Indirect International Forest Law: A Different Type of Fragmentation	162
5.3.4	Beyond Classic Conflict Resolution: Coordination and Cooperation	164
5.3.5	The Obstacle of Fragmentation to International Treaty Approaches: Interim Conclusions	168
5.4	The Coordination Convention Approach: A New Framework for International Forest Regulation	170
5.5	Coordination Reconsidered: Final Conclusions	176
	References	178
6	Conclusions	183
	Reference	188
7	Summary	189