ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The process of writing a book is often long and full of obstacles, disappointments, sorrow, joy, excitement and enthusiasm. The effect of these conflicting emotions, especially when that path is lonely, is often therapeutic for writers: they only realize all these benefits at the end of the route. The feeling that I, as a writer, have contributed, even in the least, to the revelation of some aspects of the history of my homeland is priceless.

This book could not have been written without the help of Professors Andreas Kapardis and Costa Gouliamos: their comments on the general idea and arguments were decisive. Special thanks to David Porter for his support in editing and proofreading this book: his professionalism made the whole procedure less stressful, and I owe him a huge debt of gratitude. Also thanks to Kristin Purdy and Michelle Smith at Palgrave Macmillan for their great help in finalizing the book.

I am also grateful to Vassos Constandinou and Christos Spyrou at the Press and Information Office of the Republic of Cyprus, for helping me with my research at the press archive, and to Professor Philip Murphy, Director of the Institute of Commonwealth Studies of the University of London, for awarding me a visiting fellowship at the Institute: without this fellowship, I would not have been able to conduct in-depth research at the National Archives in London.

Finally, many thanks to my family for having patience with me while I took on yet another challenge which reduced the amount of time I have had to spend with them. This includes my parents and sisters for their encouragement and especially my wife, Stavri, for believing in me and supporting me all the way. Lastly, I dedicate this book to my son Christos, my greatest source of love, my personal relief from weariness, my best motivation.
