

Postmodern Suburban Spaces

Joseph George

Postmodern Suburban Spaces

Philosophy, Ethics, and Community in Post-War
American Fiction

palgrave
macmillan

Joseph George
University of North Carolina at Greensboro
Greensboro, North Carolina, USA

ISBN 978-3-319-41005-0 ISBN 978-3-319-41006-7 (eBook)
DOI 10.1007/978-3-319-41006-7

Library of Congress Control Number: 2016954924

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2016

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use. The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made.

Cover design by Samantha Johnson

Printed on acid-free paper

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by Springer Nature
The registered company is Springer International Publishing AG Switzerland

To my Dad, still the smartest guy I know.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Like all projects, this book owes its existence to contributions from my various communities, beginning with my fellow graduate students at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. In particular, I owe thanks to Matt Mullins, Dan Burns, Zach Laminack, Andrew Pisano, and Cindy Webb, for the thoughtful conversation, well-timed comments, and, of course, the many suggestions for further reading.

I would also like to give special thanks to those who helped guide this project in its form as a dissertation, starting with my readers Tony Cuda, for reminding me to act like a literary critic and for offering boundless reassurance, and Scott Romine, for exposing me to some of the most important texts in my academic development and for supplying infallibly precise and essential critiques. I am most indebted to my adviser Christian Moraru, for introducing me to thinkers who still shape my understanding of what literature is and does, for the intellectual hospitality he has extended, and for the encouragement and guidance he has given as the project evolved from dissertation to book. I hope to become a scholar worthy of their example.

Finally, I need to offer special thanks to my children: Dylan, Alyse, and Kierstyn. I thank the older two for being patient as I kept my nose in books and fingers on keyboards to finish this up, and the youngest for listening to me read through drafts as I took her for walks or tried to rock her to sleep. It would take a book ten times this length to tell you how much I love you.

CONTENTS

Introduction: Nowhere to Now Here	1
1 Against Fence Thinking: Welcoming the Racial Enemy	43
2 My Home Is Your Home: Property, Propriety, and Neighbors	81
3 Domesticated Strangers: Fissures Within the Nuclear Family	121
4 Assimilation and Appropriation: Contest and Collaboration in Global Suburbia	163
Conclusion: Changing the Suburban Myth	183
Work Cited	191
Index	203