

Palgrave Studies in Nineteenth-Century
Writing and Culture

Series Editor
Joseph Bristow
Department of English
University of California – Los Angeles
Los Angeles, California
USA

Palgrave Studies in Nineteenth-Century Writing and Culture is a new monograph series that aims to represent the most innovative research on literary works that were produced in the English-speaking world from the time of the Napoleonic Wars to the fin de siècle. Attentive to the historical continuities between 'Romantic' and 'Victorian', the series will feature studies that help scholarship to reassess the meaning of these terms during a century marked by diverse cultural, literary, and political movements. The main aim of the series is to look at the increasing influence of types of historicism on our understanding of literary forms and genres. It reflects the shift from critical theory to cultural history that has affected not only the period 1800–1900 but also every field within the discipline of English literature. All titles in the series seek to offer fresh critical perspectives and challenging readings of both canonical and non-canonical writings of this era.

More information about this series at <http://www.springer.com/series/14607>

Helen Kingstone

Victorian Narratives of the Recent Past

Memory, History, Fiction

palgrave
macmillan

Helen Kingstone
Leeds Centre for Victorian Studies
Leeds Trinity University
Leeds, United Kingdom

Palgrave Studies in Nineteenth-Century Writing and Culture
ISBN 978-3-319-49549-1 ISBN 978-3-319-49550-7 (eBook)
DOI 10.1007/978-3-319-49550-7

Library of Congress Control Number: 2017932395

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2017

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use. The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Cover illustration © Beryl Peters Collection / Alamy Stock Photo

Printed on acid-free paper

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by Springer Nature
The registered company is Springer International Publishing AG
The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

For my parents

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Most obvious and important thanks in the development of this book go to my doctoral supervisors, Rosemary Mitchell and Nathan Uglow at Leeds Trinity University, and Richard Salmon at the University of Leeds, for their generous, patient, and encouraging support of my research. Particular thanks to Rosemary for her generosity with her time, her ideas, and her collection of highly relevant books. Clare Pettitt, Katy Mullin, and Jane de Gay, my thesis examiners, offered thought-provoking suggestions for taking my work further. Joseph Bristow's attentive and wide-ranging editorial work on the manuscript has since assisted the transition of that project into this book.

This book would not have come into being without a long succession of people who have shared their ideas with me and thus shaped mine. Grant Sherwood showed me that the subject of History could encompass almost everything. From my time at St Peter's College, Oxford, I owe to Muireann O'Cinneide my delight in Victorian literature, and to Lawrence Goldman my love for the work of Carlyle, Ruskin, Morris, and more. Neither would this book have come into being without the training I received during my MA studies at York. I owe a great deal to Jane Moody, who was always an inspiration, and to Trev Broughton, whose support and collaboration continues.

I also owe many more personal debts. I am very grateful to Rachel Webster for lunchtime conversations, mutual book-swappings and Victorianist companionship, to Susan Anderson for mutual manuscript-feedback sessions, and to Richard Whitney for making me rethink my definitions of history and literary studies. I am grateful to Dan for many things, but these include dedicated proof-reading, discussions about diagrams, and his living with and beyond the book. I owe most and longest to my family: Sheila, Jannet, Erik, and Kamie. Their respective longstanding support, keen eye for detail, intellectual rigour, and enthusiasm for debate makes them largely responsible for all this.

An early version of some material from Chapters 5 and 6 appeared in Clio: An Interdisciplinary Journal of Literature, History, and the Philosophy of History 43.3 (Summer 2014), and is reproduced by kind permission here.

CONTENTS

1	Introduction: Who's Afraid of Contemporary History?	1
Part I A Conceptual Framework
2	History as a Temporal Continuum: From Walter Scott to William Stubbs	29
3	The Social Continuum: History without Heroes from William Hazlitt to J. R. Seeley	55
4	Gendered Genres: Professional History Versus Antiquarianism and the Historical Novel	71
Part II Victorian Historians and the Recent Past: Harriet Martineau, J. R. Green, Spencer Walpole, and Charlotte M. Yonge
5	Immersion and Overview in Histories without Hindsight	87
6	Power to the People? Proto-Social History	115

Part III Victorian Novelists and the Recent Past: Walter Scott, Charlotte Brontë, Elizabeth Gaskell, and George Eliot

7	In Defence of Living Memory: “Sixty Years Since” or Less	141
8	“Unhistoric” Individuals in the Provincial Novel	175
9	Conclusions	205
	Bibliography	217
	Index	237

LIST OF FIGURES

Fig. 1.1	The multiplicity of the recent past	5
Fig. 8.1	The social structure in gender and class terms	177