The early modern period was witness to an incipient process of transculturation through exploration, mercantilism, colonization, and migration that set into motion a process of globalization that continues today. The purpose of this series is to bring together a cultural studies approach—which freely and unapologetically crosses disciplinary, theoretical, and political boundaries—with early modern texts and artefacts that bear the traces of transculturalization and globalization in order to deepen our understanding of sites of exchange between and within early modern culture(s). This process can be studied on a large as well as on a small scale, and this new series is dedicated to both. Possible topics of interest include, but are not limited to: texts dealing with mercantilism, travel, exploration, immigration, foreigners, enabling technologies (such as shipbuilding and navigational instrumentation), mathematics, science, rhetoric, art, architecture, intellectual history, religion, race, sexuality, and gender.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

My journey to the publication of this book would not be possible without the kind and generous support of many individuals and institutions. First of all, I would like to thank all the individuals who have trusted and shared their lives with me for this project. This project would not be possible without them.

Janet Hoskins has provided relentless encouragement, guidance, and mentorship since my graduate training at the University of Southern California.

Viet Thanh Nguyen, Leland Saito, Jane Iwamura, and Macarena Gómez-Barris have also helped me with bringing this project to fruition since the beginning.

Thu-Huong Nguyễn-Võ has given me the inspiration and enduring support to study the Vietnamese diaspora since the first day I was in her “Vietnamese American Experience” course at UCLA.

Ed Falconer kindly volunteered to produce the maps included in this book, using publicly available data sources from ESRI.

Long Tran, Titimary Tran, Tan Tran, Darlena Tran, and Quach Minh Khoi and Caodai youths at his temple devoted many hours helping me with data collection and transcription.

Many colleagues and friends for their companionship, laughters, and motivation.

Palgrave staff provided many careful readings and insightful editorial feedback on the manuscript.

The Council of American Overseas Research Centers/Center for Khmer Studies (Ph.D. Research Fellowship), Japan Society for the Promotion of Science (Postdoctoral Fellowship Program for North American and European Researchers/Obei Tanki), Academia Sinica (Doctoral Fellowship in the Humanities and Social Sciences), École Française d'Extrême-Orient (Field Research Grant), International Institute for Asian Studies (Research Associate Fellowship), Williams College (Gaius Charles Bolin Fellowship), University of Wisconsin-Madison (Foreign Language Area Studies Fellowship), and the University of Southern California (various funding sources) provided generous financial assistance for Khmer language training and the data collection and writing stages of the project.

The International Sociological Association's International Ph.D. Laboratory, University of Bergen's Research School, Universitair Centrum Sint-Ignatius Antwerpen's Summer School, and the University of Toronto's Dissertation Workshop—among many others—gave me the opportunities to engage with and receive analytical insights from researchers throughout the world.

My family—ba, mẹ, anh chị em, và các cháu—has given me love, joy, and purpose in every step of this journey.

Thank you.
