About the Authors

Sorin Adam Matei is a Professor, Brian Lamb School of Communication, Purdue University. Dr. Matei studies the emergence of new forms of sociability online. His papers and books examined the emergence of social capital online, the effect of offline sociability online on online relationships, and the generation of trust and authority in knowledge markets. His work was funded by the National Science Foundation, Kettering Foundation, and Mellon Foundation.

Brian C. Britt Assistant Professor, Department of Journalism and Mass Communication, South Dakota State University. Dr. Britt is a computational social scientist who focuses on the intersection between organizational communication and new media, with a particular emphasis on the strategies employed by individuals positioning themselves in online organizations. His work has been funded by the National Science Foundation and the National Institutes of Health and has resulted in several book chapters in edited volumes.
