ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This volume emerged from an organized session on ‘The Urban Political at a time of Late Neoliberalism’ held at the 2015 Association of American Geographers annual meeting in Chicago. The conceptualization of the urban political presented here was shaped by the collaborative insights of all who took part in the panels and who joined in the discussions from the audience. In addition to those who contributed chapters to this volume, we would like to thank Justin Beaumont, Sinan Erenşü, David Garbin, Enrico Gualini, Lazaros Karaliotas, Ozan Karaman, Robert Lake, Peter Lindner, Gareth Millington, Lidia Monza, Samuel Mössner, Oli Mould, Daniel Mullis, Marit Rosol, Parastou Saberi, Renee Tapp, David Wachsmuth, Kevin Ward, and Zemiattin Yildiz. At Palgrave Macmillan we are indebted to Kyra Saniewski and to the editorial staff for seeing the book through its writing and production. We are also grateful to the anonymous referees who commented on the proposal and sharpened its analyses.

Theresa Enright would like to thank her colleagues and students at the University of Toronto. The 2014 Summer Institute in Urban Studies in Manchester, and the 2014 Summer Institute in Economic Geography in Frankfurt were both instrumental in forging the intellectual connections upon which this volume is based. For their labour and advice at these events, special thanks are due to Marc Boeckler, David Imbroscio, Eugene McCann, and Jamie Peck. At home Theresa is ever grateful to have the love and support of Donald Kingsbury and Cormac Kingsbury-Enright.

Ugo Rossi would like to thank his colleagues and students at the University and the Politecnico of Turin, particularly those involved in the Urban and Regional Development PhD programme. Ugo would like also to express his gratitude to his comrades in the Effimera and Euronomade collectives who have inspired him with intellectually and politically challenging discussions and initiatives. At home Ugo is ever grateful to Rebecca Rossi and Elisabetta Benigni for their love and their joyous approach to life.
