

Rethinking Political Violence

Series Editor
Roger Mac Ginty
Professor of Peace and Conflict Studies
University of Manchester
Manchester, UK

This series provides a new space in which to interrogate and challenge much of the conventional wisdom of political violence. International and multidisciplinary in scope, this series explores the causes, types and effects of contemporary violence connecting key debates on terrorism, insurgency, civil war and peace-making. The timely Rethinking Political Violence offers a sustained and refreshing analysis reappraising some of the fundamental questions facing societies in conflict today and understanding attempts to ameliorate the effects of political violence.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

There are a number of people who have been integral to the completion of this book. First and foremost, I would like to thank Claudia Cruz Alvarez for her unwavering support and inspiration over the years. I would also like to thank Kevin Maher, Julie Mirtorabi and Afshin Mirtorabi. I owe a debt of gratitude to Doug Stokes and Ruth Blakeley for their superb academic guidance throughout my time at the University of Kent, where I completed my PhD and where the core ideas of this book were developed. I would like to thank the School of Politics and International Relations at the University of Kent for providing me with a scholarship to complete the PhD, for giving me such a wonderful opportunity and for providing me with a vibrant research community that directly benefited the research that formed key parts of this book. I also owe a debt of gratitude to Christopher Cramer and Hugh Miall, who gave me invaluable and constructive comments regarding earlier versions of this book. I am also grateful to the University of Salford for providing me with funding and the required time to attend the European Consortium for Political Research's course on Advanced Process Training Methods, which has further refined my use of process tracing.

I would also like to thank the following people who, directly and indirectly, have had a significant and positive impact on the completion of this book (in alphabetical order by surname): Isabel Alvarez Pellón, Raul Calero Garcia, Miriam Caraballo, Rodolfo Cruz Suarez, Philip Cunliffe, Oliver Bazbazat Handal and family, Sudakshini Marini Perera, Andrew Thomson and Stephen Ward.

An earlier version of sections of Chapter 4 was published as: ‘The Fatal Attraction of Civil War Economies: Foreign Direct Investment and Political Violence, A Case Study of Colombia’, International Studies Review, 17 (2): 217–248, 2015 (permission to reproduce these sections was granted by Oxford University Press).

An earlier version of sections of Chapter 5 was published as: ‘Rooted in Violence: Civil War, International Trade and the Expansion of Palm Oil in Colombia’, New Political Economy, 20 (2), 299–330, 2015 (permission to reproduce these sections was granted by Taylor & Francis).
