As a vital field of scholarship, book history has now reached a stage of maturity where its early work can be reassessed and built upon. That is the goal of New Directions in Book History. This series will publish monographs in English that employ advanced methods and open up new frontiers in research, written by younger, mid-career, and senior scholars. Its scope is global, extending to the Western and non-Western worlds and to all historical periods from antiquity to the 21st century, including studies of script, print, and post-print cultures. New Directions in Book History, then, will be broadly inclusive but always in the vanguard. It will experiment with inventive methodologies, explore unexplored archives, debate overlooked issues, challenge prevailing theories, study neglected subjects, and demonstrate the relevance of book history to other academic fields. Every title in this series will address the evolution of the historiography of the book, and every one will point to new directions in book scholarship. New Directions in Book History will be published in three formats: single-author monographs; edited collections of essays in single or multiple volumes; and shorter works produced through Palgrave's e-book (EPUB2) 'Pivot' stream. Book proposals should emphasize the innovative aspects of the work, and should be sent to either of the two series editors.

Editorial board: Marcia Abreu, University of Campinas, Brazil; Cynthia Brokaw, Brown University, USA; Matt Cohen, University of Texas at Austin, USA; Archie Dick, University of Pretoria, South Africa; Martyn Lyons, University of New South Wales, Australia.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Sections of this book build on my journal article ‘Conceptualizing Audience Experience at the Literary Festival’, Continuum: Journal of Media & Cultural Studies 29.1: 84–96 (2015) and an article I authored with Simone Murray, “‘Live and Local’? The Significance of Digital Media for Writers’ Festivals’, Convergence: The International Journal of Research into New Media Technologies 23.1: 61–78 (2017).

Audience members at the Melbourne Writers Festival, the Emerging Writers’ Festival, the Clunes Booktown Festival, the Edinburgh International Book Festival, and the Port Eliot Festival were hugely generous with their time and opinions. A very special thank you is also due to the organisers of the Melbourne Writers Festival, Emerging Writers’ Festival, and Clunes Booktown Festival for making time in their hectic professional schedules to talk to me.

Many people provided generous support and assistance with this book. It began life as my doctoral thesis, and the expertise and sage advice of my supervisors Simone Murray and Robin Gerster at Monash University were invaluable to its conception and execution. My fellow doctoral students, particularly Mishka Kent and Kevin Patrick, were unfailing sources of advice and fellow-feeling, as was my colleague Beth Driscoll at the University of Melbourne. Mehmet Özmen at Monash University provided valuable support with survey design and data evaluation, and assistance in implementing quality checks and distributing the survey was also provided by the staff at Qualtrics.

My family offered love, support, and distraction throughout this project. I am particularly grateful to my mother, Thérèse Osborne, to whom I dedicate this book. Your encouragement, reassurance, sense of humour, and patient reading of my drafts mean the world to me.
