ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book would have never emerged without the great encouragement about running I received from Jeff Pagel and Phil Rogosheske as a young man. Though they are unlikely to ever see this and probably do not remember an earnest, shy, scrawny runner, their early influence and wisdom remains with me to this day. I have trod many paths over years and those paths eventually brought me to Eastbourne. The support of my compatriots at the University of Brighton and our occasional runs along the seafront and around Whitbread Hollow served as therapeutic mobile meetings where many an idea and project were hashed out over the years, though they had no idea that this project would ever begin and emerge. Most notable among those who ran alongside me were members of the Chelsea School: John Sugden, Dan Burdsey, Jayne Caudwell, and John Lambert. A debt of gratitude, and probably a good bottle of red, goes to Mark Doidge for putting me in touch with the commissioning editors at Palgrave in the UK who kindly passed me on to the great staff at Palgrave USA, who have been enthusiastic and incredibly helpful and understanding with this project as it ran its own route through Palgrave's publication processes. Alexis Nelson, Mary al-Sayed, and Kyra Saniewski have been fantastic before handing the baton over to the production team. Time to lace up my shoes and head for the hills.
