

The Arc of Faith-Based Initiatives

John P. Bartkowski · Susan E. Grettenberger

The Arc of Faith-Based Initiatives

Religion's Changing Role in Welfare Service
Provision

Springer

John P. Bartkowski
Department of Sociology
The University of Texas at San Antonio
San Antonio, TX
USA

Susan E. Grettenberger
Department of Sociology,
Anthropology and Social Work
Central Michigan University
Mount Pleasant, MI
USA

ISBN 978-3-319-90667-6 ISBN 978-3-319-90668-3 (eBook)
<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-319-90668-3>

Library of Congress Control Number: 2018939937

© Springer International Publishing AG, part of Springer Nature 2018

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are reserved by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Printed on acid-free paper

This Springer imprint is published by the registered company Springer International Publishing AG part of Springer Nature
The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

Acknowledgements

No book is an accomplishment of its authors and contributors alone. We are grateful, first and foremost, to the agency directors, program managers, and clients whose perspectives—and very words—are represented in this book. Without the gracious investment of their time in our research, this volume would not exist. We hope that we have fairly represented their views here.

We are thankful for generous funding for the initial wave of data collection from the Pew Charitable Trusts through a grant to the Rockefeller Institute of Government. We are especially grateful to Richard Nathan, David Wright, and Thomas Gais at the Rockefeller Institute for their unswerving commitment to this project in its early and most formative stages.

We are also thankful to our many colleagues on the Roundtable for Religion and Social Welfare. The Rockefeller Institute convened the Roundtable on several occasions for lively discussions in which we participated and from which we benefitted immensely. Many of these colleagues contributed to the Faith Integration Survey and other research instruments that were used to conduct our study. We are particularly thankful for their important contributions and hope they see their ideas fruitfully employed and explored in this volume. Several of these Roundtable colleagues commented on our early research findings from the first wave of data collection. The conclusions offered here are our own, but we hope these colleagues see how their input shaped this work.

Several other colleagues showed patience with us during the writing of this volume. The authors thank the Springer Editor, Evelien Bakker, for shepherding this volume through the review process. The authors relied heavily on the thoughtful comments of several anonymous reviewers who scrutinized this volume prior to its publication. We took such comments most seriously and made every effort to integrate their remarks into our work. We hope those reviewers will recognize their formidable influence. The authors are grateful to Frank Howell, who suggested Springer as a suitable outlet for this work. The vision of leaders and staff at Springer has been instrumental in carrying this volume across a finish line that, prior to our relationship with Springer, sometimes seemed like a moving target.

Writing a book is accompanied by unanticipated twists and turns, and this volume was no exception. This work introduced a number of hurdles along the way in terms of data availability, coordination, scheduling, and other challenges. John and Susan are thankful for Steve Smith's contribution in Chap. 5, as well as his perseverance and foresight. Collaborative research adds a layer of complexity to scholarship, and we believe that our relationships as well as our diverse disciplines enrich this volume.

The patience exhibited by trusted family members, friends, and colleagues is also cherished. John is especially grateful for the stamina demonstrated by his wife, Nicci, during discussions of this book's key arguments and challenges introduced by writing several portions of this volume. He is also thankful for conversations about drug treatment programs and related concerns with Jerri Avery, Eileen Ewing, Pam Smith, and Mark Stovall. John was supported by the capable research assistance of Amanda Avenoso, Favor Campbell, and Nicole Reed. Susan is indebted to her social work faculty colleagues at Central Michigan University for their patience throughout the development of this volume. She is particularly grateful for the support of her wife, Nicole Springer, and her sister, Charlotte Fitzgerald, at various points in the project. Finally, she acknowledges Leisa Fuller for her very able intellectual contributions and logistical work during the data collection. Steve Smith would like to thank Benjamina Menashe for her editorial and research support in the preparation of Chap. 5. Additional research assistance was also provided by Laurie Werner and Stephanie Goldberg Belle. Steve is also grateful for the support of the Nancy Bell Evans Center on Nonprofits & Philanthropy at the Evans School of Governance and Public Policy at the University of Washington.

Contents

1 Faith-Based Persistence and Permutations	1
1.1 The Aims of This Volume	5
1.2 Intersecting Influences: Faith, Funding, Program Domains, and Regional Contexts	8
1.3 Comparative Case Studies: Faith-Intensive, Faith-Related, and Secular Programs	11
1.4 Why Qualitative Methods? The Value of an Interpretive Approach	15
1.5 What's Ahead: Layout of the Volume	20
References	23
2 Faith-Based Initiatives Reconsidered: The Complicated Relationship Between Religion and Social Welfare Service Provision	25
2.1 Faith-Based Versus Secular Social Services: What Previous Research Tells Us	26
2.2 Faith Integration: A Multifaceted and Dynamic Perspective	31
2.3 Layered Case Studies and the Three C's: Content, Culture, and Context	33
2.4 The Comparative Dimension	36
References	38
3 Faith-Based Versus Secular Support for Fragile Families: Parent Education in the Rural South	41
3.1 What Do We Know About Parenting Programs? Prior Research Briefly Summarized	43
3.2 Mississippi Faith-Based and Secular Programs: Convergences in Programmatic Content	45
3.2.1 Shared Programmatic Objectives	45

3.2.2	Tailored Programming and Client-Centered Care	47
3.2.3	Comprehensive Approaches to Parent Education	49
3.3	Organizational Culture, Ecological Context, and Faith Integration	54
3.3.1	Distinctive Definitions of Parenting: Technical Competency Versus Moral Responsibility	54
3.3.2	The Power of Organizational Culture: Divergent Missions and Motivations	59
3.3.3	Spirituality a la Carte: The Influence of Mississippi's Evangelical Religious Ecology	61
3.4	Taking Stock: Self-Assessments of Faith-Based and Secular Programs	64
	References	68
4	Across the Continuum of Care: Transitional Housing Programs in the Midwest	69
4.1	Key Insights from Previous Research on Transitional Housing	71
4.2	The Faith-Funding Nexus in Transitional Housing: Evidence of an Elective Affinity	73
4.3	Government Funding and Faith Intensity in Transitional Housing Programs	78
4.4	Evidence of Faith	82
4.4.1	Programmatic Content and Structure	82
4.4.2	Expressions of Faith	84
4.4.3	Collaboration as a Shared Cultural Touchstone	85
4.4.4	Similar Objectives	87
4.5	Parsing Out the Differences	88
	References	92
5	Addiction Recovery: Residential Drug and Alcohol Treatment Programs in the Pacific Northwest	95
5.1	The Evolving Context of Substance Abuse Treatment and Related Research	96
5.2	Comparing Faith-Based and Secular Addiction Recovery Programs: Broad Patterns	103
5.3	Holistic Treatment Services and Organizational Culture	107
5.4	Distinct Clienteles and Diverse Paths into Treatment Programs	109
5.5	Staffing Considerations, Programmatic Adaptations, and Resource Streams	112
5.6	Community Ties Among Drug Treatment Programs	116
5.7	Assessments of Drug Treatment Programs: The Thorny Question of Effectiveness	117

5.8 Program Effectiveness: Struggles, Strategies, and Relative Successes 120

References 126

6 Does Faith Matter? Client Transformation in Parenting, Housing, and Addiction Recovery Programs 129

6.1 In Pursuit of Better Parenting: Change and Transformation in Mississippi 130

6.1.1 Distinctive Transformation Goals: Change of Head Versus Change of Heart 130

6.1.2 Divergent Pathways: Altering Institutions Versus Changing Individuals 132

6.1.3 Parents’ Perspectives: Experiential Changes Among Program Clients 134

6.2 Shared Goals, Different Means: Transitional Housing in Michigan 139

6.2.1 Setting the Stage: The Fight Against Homelessness 140

6.2.2 Faith-Intensive Versus Secular Approaches: Mary’s House and Hospitality House 141

6.2.3 Faith-Based Diversity in Transitional Housing 144

6.3 Client Transformation in Addiction Treatment Programs in the Northwest 147

6.3.1 Stepping to Recovery: Transformation and the Twelve-Step Model 148

6.3.2 Integrating Faith: Programmatic Distinctions and Contextual Influences 150

6.3.3 Transformation, Program Structure, and the Causes of Addiction 151

6.3.4 Facilitating Transformation: Externalized Standards Versus Individualized Treatment 153

7 Conclusion: Promising Partners or Strange Bedfellows? Faith-Based Providers and Government Funders 157

7.1 Fixed or Fluid Organizational Identities? Beyond the Faith-Based/Secular Divide 158

7.2 Context Counts: Programming Strategies, Service Domains, Regional Subcultures, and Religious Ecologies 162

7.3 Public Funding: Sustainability or Strings Attached? 166

7.4 Holistic Is in the Eye of Beholder 167

7.5 Final Thoughts, Last Words ... and the Fate of Faith-Based Initiatives 169

References 172

Appendix A: Methods in Brief	173
Appendix B: Research Instruments	177
Appendix C: Descriptions of Programs and Agencies	193
Index	209

List of Tables

Table 1.1	Descriptive information on social service providers featured in study	13
Table 3.1	Rural Mississippi parent education programs	43
Table 4.1	Michigan transitional housing programs	70
Table 4.2	Michigan transitional housing agencies' funding sources and budgets	76
Table 5.1	Drug treatment programs in Washington-Oregon	97