The Black Religion/Womanist Thought/Social Justice Series produces works engaging any dimension of black religion or womanist thought as they pertain to social justice. Womanist thought is a new approach in the study of African American women's perspectives. The series includes a variety of African American religious expressions; traditions such as Protestant and Catholic Christianity, Islam, Judaism, Humanism, African diasporic practices, religion and gender, religion and black gays/lesbians, ecological justice issues, African American religiosity and its relation to African religions, new black religious movements or religious dimensions in African American "secular" experiences.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Many causes and conditions and many people have played a part in the evolution of this book. I want to acknowledge my friend Dianne Jacob who gave me Thich Nhat Hanh's book Touching Peace and Eric Poche, the former volunteer director at Zen Hospice Project, who right around the same time (a month after the attack on the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001) invited me to be a hospice volunteer. Through mindfulness, meditation, and service to those who are dying, I have been able to walk this planet with more ease, confidence, and compassion.

I also want to acknowledge the Community of Mindful Living in the San Francisco East Bay, including Dharma Teacher Lyn Fine, and Spirit Rock Meditation Center, including Dharma Teacher Gil Fronsdal, for their teachings, communities, and leadership trainings of which I have been formed.

Volunteers at Zen Hospice Project introduced me to meditation retreats and Dharma Teacher Gil Fronsdal. Gil, along with Chaplain Jennifer Block, Diana Lion, and Zen Priest Paul Haller, led the Sati Center for Buddhist Studies Introduction to Chaplaincy program where I met my dharma friends Mary Doane, Robert Cusick, Lori Hefner, Janet Keyes, and Kim McLaughlin. Their friendships have helped sustain me, my practice, and my dedication to spiritual care.

Alta Bates Summit Medical Center is where I did my Clinical Pastoral Education (CPE) and San Francisco General Hospital and Pathways Homecare and Hospice are places where I interned, volunteered, and worked. These experiences eventually led me to work in another clinical setting, Skyland Trail, where I learned more about what it means to be a chaplain, pastoral counselor, and "spiritual clinician" in a mental health-care organization.

Pamela Cooper-White, Greg Ellison, Bill Harkins, Skip Johnson, Emmanuel Lartey, and Carolyn Akua McCrary are some of the best pastoral counseling professors one will find, and I'm especially grateful to Skip Johnson for inviting me to participate in the pastoral counseling Basic Residency program at Care and Counseling Center of Georgia, which led to me going back to school, one last time, at Columbia Theological Seminary. I want to thank all the women who participated in my dissertation research project, which led to the writing of this book. The dissertation would not have been written but for the engagement of my dissertation committee Emmanuel Lartey, Pamela Cooper-White, Beverly Wallace, and consultant Duane Bidwell. These learning experiences led to me being hired as faculty at United Theological Seminary of the Twin Cities. I want to thank Carolyn Jones Medine for encouraging me to publish this book and Chenxing Han for proofreading. Thank you Palgrave Pivot for taking the risk of publishing this book. This has been an amazing life and professional journey that was made all the better with my spouse, Tracey Scott, who has supported me all along the way. Gratitude to you all.
