This book is dedicated to the tireless efforts, insight, and creative courage of our Queensborough Community College (QCC) colleagues: students, faculty, and staff. It has been a pleasure learning from and with you. Also, to our children Raenen, Mayray, and Yotam for whom we do the work we do.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This volume is the result of a true team effort on the parts of many faculty, students, and staff at Queensborough Community College (QCC) and the Harriet & Kenneth Kupferberg Holocaust Center (KHC). Proceeding chronologically, we would like to thank the Challenge Grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH), which provided matching funds to our generous donors' contributions and allowed us to establish the KHC/NEH Endowment Fund to maintain the Colloquium Series in perpetuity. Of course, many people at QCC helped implement these grant programs, starting with President Diane B. Call and Vice President of Institutional Advancement Rosemary Zins. We would also like to thank the team that developed the proposal and helped grow the concept over the first several years, including QCC faculty members Drs. Sarah Danielsson, Susan Jacobowitz, and Emily Tai in addition to former KHC Executive Director, Dr. Arthur Flug. More broadly, we are grateful for the staff of the KHC, especially Assistant Director Marisa Hollywood, who helped plan, implement, and manage the budgets for most of the series represented in this book.

A special acknowledgment is due to the faculty coordinators who led the NEH grant over its initial years and who, through their efforts, helped shape what it has become. Equally important are the many colloquia speakers—including scholars, directors, policymakers, and genocide and mass atrocity survivors—who generously contributed their time, experience, and expertise to the college and our larger community. Additionally, we are thankful for the QCC faculty who aligned courses with the annual Colloquia. Their inclusive approach to teaching and to generating learning communities was essential to the success of these past five years, and it will be equally so in future endeavors. Finally, we must recognize QCC's students, whose openness, active engagement, and creativity serve as the inspiration and foundation for all of our work.

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Azadeh Aalai, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor of Psychology at Queensborough Community College (QCC), the City University of New York (CUNY). She is a social psychologist specializing in mass media depictions, the psychology of aggression, warfare, and genocide, and gender-related studies. She is also an adjunct for the M.A. program in Psychology at New York University. She was the recipient of a Kupferberg Holocaust Center/National Endowment for the Humanities (KHC/NEH) grant naming her the scholar-in-residence at the KHC for 2017–2018. She has also worked with the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum as a recipient of the Silberman faculty seminar exploring the themes of sex and gender during the Holocaust.

Rose Marie Äikäs, Ph.D., M.A., M.S.W., is an Associate Professor of Criminal Justice at QCC, CUNY. Äikäs has taught at the University of Helsinki-School of Law, Smith College-Graduate School of Social Work, Rutgers University School of Criminal Justice and Social Work, and in a New York State correctional facility. Her courses include Introduction to Criminal Justice, Criminality and Mental Illness, Social Work Research Theory, and Criminal Justice Policy Implications for Social Work Practice. Äikäs has international and domestic prison research experience, professional experience as a criminal justice and social work practitioner, and program development experience.

Kathleen Tamayo Alves, D.A., is an Assistant Professor of English at QCC, CUNY, where she teaches literature and composition. She holds an M.A. and a D.A. in English from St. John's University. Her research centers on eighteenth-century literature and culture, biopolitics, and literary history. She has presented and published portions of her book-length project—Body Language: Medicine and the Eighteenth-Century Comic Novel. She has also received a number of awards, including the CUNY Faculty Fellowship Publication Program Award, the CUNY Academy William Stewart Travel Award, and the Professional Staff Congress (PSC)-CUNY Summer Grant.

Aliza Atik, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor of English at QCC, CUNY. She holds a Ph.D. from Stony Brook University where she won several awards for her scholarship, including an Andrew W. Mellon Dissertation Fellowship. Atik’s research interests include Victorian studies, Jewish literature, and Arab/Israeli literature. Her article, “Calibrating the Female Body: Shame, Disgust, and the Recuperative Gaze in Amos Gitai’s Kadosh,” was published in Shofar: An Interdisciplinary Journal of Jewish Studies. Atik also works as an assistant editor for the peer-reviewed and Modern Language Association (MLA)-indexed journal Victorian Literature and Culture.

André Brégégère, Ph.D., is an adjunct Professor of Music at QCC, CUNY, and William Patterson University. He holds a Ph.D. in composition from the Graduate Center, CUNY, with a dissertation on the music and theoretical work of Henri Pousseur. His recent and ongoing scholarly work includes “Some Thoughts on Maximally Smooth Voice-Leading among Pcsets and Set Classes” (SMT Arlington 2017) and “The Serial Concept in Pousseur’s Votre Faust” (Oxford Handbook of Faustian Music, OUP forthcoming). His music has been performed and broadcast in the United States and Europe, and released on the label New Dynamic Records. www.abregegere.com

Johannes Burgers, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor of English and Digital Humanities at Ashoka University in New Delhi, India. His chapter reflects work done while an assistant professor at QCC, CUNY. His research focuses on intersections of race science, sexuality, and modernity in a transnational context, specifically the influence of anti-Semitism on literature. His articles on this topic have been published in The Journal of the History of Ideas, Jewish Studies Quarterly, and edited collections. His book manuscript investigates the relationship between anti-Semitism and modernism in the work of Marcel Proust, James Joyce, Gertrude Stein, William Faulkner, and Robert Musil.

Julia B. Carroll, Ph.D., is a Professor of English, developmental English, and English as a Second Language (ESL) at QCC, CUNY. She has co-authored multiple peer-reviewed articles focused on teaching reading and writing skills to multilingual learners utilizing curriculum related to the Holocaust, genocide, and mass atrocity. She is also a practitioner of Academic Service-Learning (ASL), and her research in this area has been published in the following three journals: AAC&U's Diversity and Democracy, Teaching English in the Two-Year College, and Basic Writing eJournal.

Steven Dahlke, D.M.A., is an Associate Professor of Music at QCC, CUNY. He holds a D.M.A. in vocal performance, choral music, and music education from University of Southern California (USC) with highest honors and his M.M. from Manhattan School of Music. Dahlke has published and presented in the areas of Choral Music Education, ASL, and Global Diversity Learning. He has soloed with the Oregon Symphony Orchestra, Seattle Symphony Pops, Portland Youth Philharmonic, Portland Baroque Orchestra, and Aspen Music festival, among others. He conducts musical theater and is co-director of Jazz Hands Children's Theater, advancing kinesthetic and empathic communication.

Melissa Dennihy, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor of English at QCC, CUNY. Her research focuses on multiethnic US literature, community college pedagogies, and the teaching of writing and literature. Dennihy's work has been published in Pedagogy, Teaching English in the Two-Year College, MELUS, and Southern Studies, as well as numerous essay collections.

Barbara K. Emanuele, M.A., is an adjunct Lecturer of English at QCC, CUNY. She has served as an educator and an administrator in CUNY for over 20 years. Her focus is on composition instruction to students in an urban setting.

Franca Ferrari-Bridgers, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor of Communication at QCC, CUNY. She holds a Master's degree in Hispano-American languages and literatures (Università Statale, Milan, Italy, 1995); a Master's degree in linguistics (Freie Universität, Berlin, Germany, 1998); a Ph.D. in theoretical linguistics (New York University, 2005); and a Master's degree in experimental psychology (Brooklyn College, 2015). Ferrari-Bridgers' research interests are in the field of linguistics, psycholinguistics, listening assessments, pedagogical research in high-impact practices, and higher education in prison.

Aviva Geismar, M.F.A., is an Assistant Professor of Dance at QCC, CUNY. Geismar is also the Artistic Director of Drastic Action, a contemporary dance company that has performed extensively in New York City, throughout the United States, and in Germany. Geismar's 2016 education and performance project "Dis/Location (Fort Tryon)" explored the immigrant experience in the largely immigrant neighborhood of Washington Heights, New York City. In February 2018, her choreography was presented on "Soaking Wet" at the West End Theater. Geismar holds an M.F.A. from University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and a B.F.A. from New York University.

Susan Jacobowitz, Ph.D., is an Associate Professor of English at QCC, CUNY. She earned her doctorate at Brandeis University. Her research areas include second-generation experience including literature, graphic texts and performance art, intergenerational transmission of trauma, and conflicts and challenges of Jewish identity. Her scholarship has been published in Australia, the United States, Germany, Brazil, Israel, and India.

Cary Lane, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor of English at QCC, CUNY, where he teaches freshman composition and developmental education courses. Lane's research interests include examining how arts-based teaching approaches and campus cultural centers affect learning outcomes in writing courses. Lane served as curator-in-residence at the KHC, where he curated two exhibitions and integrated exhibit content/themes into pedagogy across the disciplines. Lane received his B.A. in studio art from the University of Rochester, his M.F.A. in art theory and practice from Northwestern University, and his Ph.D. in postsecondary and adult education from Capella University.

Mirna Lekić, D.M.A., is an Assistant Professor of Music at QCC, CUNY. A pianist, she is active as a recitalist, chamber musician, and educator. Her recent publications include two critically acclaimed recordings: a debut solo album titled Masks (Centaur Records 3519), and Eastern Currents (Romeo Records 7320), a disc of contemporary chamber music. Lekić is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music, the Mannes College of Music, and the Graduate Center, CUNY. www.mirnalekic.com

Dan Leshem, Ph.D., is the former Executive Director of the KHC at QCC, CUNY. He holds a Ph.D. in comparative literature from Emory University. His dissertation, The Language of Suffering: Writing and

Reading the Holocaust, argues for the necessity of ethical approaches to interpreting Holocaust testimony. While at Emory, he served as Program Manager of the Holocaust Denial on Trial (HDOT) website. Between 2010 and 2015, Leshem served as Associate Director for Research at the USC Shoah Foundation and adjunct Assistant Professor of Comparative Literature at the University of Southern California.

Benjamin Lawrance Miller, M.F.A., is an Assistant Professor of English at QCC, CUNY, where he teaches composition and creative writing. He holds an M.F.A. in writing from CalArts and a B.A. in philosophy from Boston University. Most recently, he has published creative work in Entropy, BLYNK, and Literary Orphans. He is the co-author of “What Trump Gets Right and Wrong About Conspiracy,” an editorial in Inside Higher Ed.

Danny Sexton, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor of English at QCC, CUNY. His fields of study and research are Victorian literature and culture, postcolonial literature, science fiction, gender and sexuality, masculinity, and race. He has presented at numerous conferences and published articles on race, gender, and Victorian and postcolonial literature. Three principles guide his teaching philosophy: (1) teaching “up” to students, (2) changing the way students think, and (3) creating an atmosphere of respect that honors the various cultural and ethnic backgrounds of his students.

Amy E. Traver, Ph.D., is an Associate Professor of Sociology at QCC, CUNY. Her research interests include student success in community colleges, as well as intersections of adoption, race/ethnicity, and gender in American family life. Her most recent publications include articles in Teaching Sociology, Internet and Higher Education (with Volchok, Bidjerano, and Shea), and Qualitative Inquiry (with Duran), in addition to the co-edited volume (with Perel Katz) Service-Learning at the American Community College (Palgrave Macmillan 2014). Traver was the faculty coordinator of the 2015–2016 NEH/KHC Colloquium Series at QCC, and the 2016–2017 scholar-in-residence at QCC’s KHC.

Kathleen Wentrack, Ph.D., is an Associate Professor of Art History at QCC, CUNY. She holds a Master’s degree from the University of Amsterdam and a Ph.D. from the Graduate Center, CUNY. Wentrack’s recent publications include “1970s Feminist Practice as Heterotopian: The Stichting Vrouwen in de Beeldende Kunst and the Schule für kreativen Feminismus” in All Women Art Spaces in the Long 1970s (Liverpool University Press 2018). Wentrack is a contributing editor to Art History Teaching Resources and the peer-reviewed journal Art History Pedagogy and Practice.
