

Biracial Families

Roudi Nazarinia Roy • Alethea Rollins
Editors

Biracial Families

Crossing Boundaries, Blending Cultures,
and Challenging Racial Ideologies

 Springer

Editors

Roudi Nazarinia Roy
Department of Family and Consumer
Sciences
California State University Long Beach
Long Beach, CA, USA

Alethea Rollins
Child and Family Development Program
School of Human Services
Harmon College of Business and Professional Studies
University of Central Missouri
Warrensburg, MO, USA

ISBN 978-3-319-96159-0 ISBN 978-3-319-96160-6 (eBook)
<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-319-96160-6>

Library of Congress Control Number: 2018958309

© Springer Nature Switzerland AG 2019

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are reserved by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors, and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

This Springer imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Switzerland AG
The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

To my parents for crossing racial boundaries at a time when it wasn't always safe to do so. To Ronnie for loving me unconditionally and allowing me to be authentic. Arie and Rocco, you inspire me, challenge me, and motivate me. And you always crack me up with your inside jokes ("What's biracial?!" LOL).

—Alethea Rollins

To my parents for always encouraging me to stand up for what I believed in. To Donovan, for being my number one supporter and confidant. Mali and Maia, your curiosity for the world around you gives me a rich new perspective on life. Your laughter fills our home, and your love for music and dancing is contagious.

Alethea and I met more than 8 years ago as the student/new professional representatives for the Ethnic Minorities Section of the National Council on Family Relations. This book project led to an invaluable friendship filled with support and encouragement. I have learned so much from Alethea. Her wisdom as a mother and an academic who strives to maintain a work-life balance is inspiring. Her genuine ability to listen and to validate so many of my own experiences as a mother of two biracial daughters have made her an irreplaceable friend.

—Roudi Nazarinia Roy

Acknowledgments

When we began this project we had one clear purpose in mind: For the people, by the people. We wanted a diverse group of authors to tell a diverse story. We asked authors to use personal stories and reflections, to share openly and honestly, yet to maintain academic integrity and rigor. We are indebted to each and every author of this book; they pushed themselves personally and professionally. We are delighted with the outcome. There will always be more to say, stories left untold, and research that we missed. Yet we trust that everything written in these pages is genuine and authentic.

So long as you write what you wish to write, that is all that matters; and whether it matters for ages or only for hours, nobody can say.—Virginia Woolf (1882)

We thank each author for their commitment to this project, their patience as we traversed a few challenges to completion, and their ongoing dedication to working with and supporting diverse people and families. We appreciate Karin Horler’s hard work and editorial support on the chapters we wrote and the Springer Publishing Company for acknowledging the gap in the literature and a need for this book. Lastly, we are grateful to our families. We could not have completed this work without the support of our loving husbands and inspiring children. Thank you for giving us the space and time needed (even on vacation) to complete this important work.

Contents

Part I Introduction

Introduction	3
Roudi Nazarinia Roy and Alethea Rollins
Social Constitutionality of Race in America: Some Meanings for Bi/Multiracial Families	9
Farrell J. Webb, JahRaEl Burrell, and Sean G. Jefferson
Questions and Concerns Regarding Family Theories: Biracial and Multiracial Family Issues	33
Farrell J. Webb and Vanessa Gonlin

Part II Family Formation

Partnering Across Race	61
James E. Brooks and Jeremy Lynch
Interracial Marriages: Historical and Contemporary Trends	81
Chalandra M. Bryant and Jeneé C. Duncan
Transition to Parenthood	105
Roudi Nazarinia Roy

Part III Parenting

Parenting Mixed-Race Children	131
Fabienne Doucet, Marcella Runell Hall, and Melissa Giraud
Racial Socialization: A Developmental Perspective	159
Alethea Rollins
Biracial Families Formed Through Adoption	183
Leigh A. Leslie, Katie M. Hrapczynski, and Jennifer L. Young

Part IV Challenges and Opportunities

Diverse Family Structures Within Multiracial Families 207
Henry L. Harris, Katie W. Lamberson, and Clare P. Merlin

Racial Identity: Choices, Context, and Consequences 225
Annamaria Csizmadia and Susan White

New Directions 247
Alethea Rollins and Roudi Nazarinia Roy

Index 255

Contributors

James E. Brooks Department of Psychology, Tennessee State University, Nashville, TN, USA

Chalandra M. Bryant Department of Human Development and Family Science, University of Georgia, Athens, GA, USA

JahRaEl Burrell Kentucky Community Colleges, Versailles, KY, USA

Annamaria Csizmadia Human Development and Family Studies, University of Connecticut, Stamford, CT, USA

Fabienne Doucet Department of Teaching and Learning, Steinhardt School of Culture, Education, and Human Development, New York University, New York, NY, USA

Jeneé C. Duncan Department of Human Development and Family Science, University of Georgia, Athens, GA, USA

Melissa Giraud EmbraceRace, Amherst, MA, USA

Vanessa Gonlin Department of Sociology, Texas A&M University, College Station, TX, USA

Marcella Runell Hall Division of Student Life, Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley, MA, USA

Henry L. Harris Department of Counseling, University of North Carolina at Charlotte, Charlotte, NC, USA

Katie M. Hrapczynski Department of Family Studies and Community Development, Towson University, Towson, MD, USA

Sean G. Jefferson Department of Family and Consumer Sciences, California State University, Northridge, CA, USA

Katie W. Lamberson Department of Counseling at University of North Georgia, Dahlonega, GA, USA

Leigh A. Leslie Department of Family Science, University of Maryland, College Park, MD, USA

Jeremy Lynch Department of Psychology, Fisk University, Nashville, TN, USA

Clare P. Merlin Department of Counseling, University of North Carolina at Charlotte, Charlotte, NC, USA

Alethea Rollins Child and Family Development Program, School of Human Services, Harmon College of Business and Professional Studies, University of Central Missouri, Warrensburg, MO, USA

Roudi Nazarinia Roy Department of Family and Consumer Sciences, California State University Long Beach, Long Beach, CA, USA

Farrell J. Webb College of Health and Human Development, California State University, Northridge, CA, USA

Susan White Clinical Mental Health Counseling, Southern Connecticut State University, New Haven, CT, USA

Jennifer L. Young Department of Family Science, University of Maryland, College Park, MD, USA

About the Editors

Roudi Nazarinia Roy, Ph.D. is an assistant professor and area coordinator of Child Development and Family Studies in the Department of Family and Consumer Sciences at California State University Long Beach. She is also the 2017–2018 Ethnic Minorities Section Chair for the National Council on Family Relations. She has a B.A. in Psychology and an M.A. in Family Science from the University of British Columbia. She received her Ph.D. in Family Studies from Kansas State University in 2009. She teaches courses related to the transition to parenthood, family life education, families and diversity, and parent education. Her research interest revolves around the transition to parenthood and cultural influences on parental roles. Dr. Roy is also a consultant for community agencies serving diverse populations of families.

Alethea Rollins, Ph.D. earned her M.S. and Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina Greensboro (UNCG). She completed her post-doctoral work at the Center for Youth, Family, and Community Partnerships at UNCG. Alethea is a professor, researcher, wife, and mother. She teaches courses in human development across the lifespan, including child development and adolescence, adulthood, and death, grief, and dying. She volunteers regularly in her children's schools and with the school district at large. Her research focuses on bi-/multiracial individuals and families, parental racial socialization, and racial socialization practices of early childhood educators.

About the Authors

James E. Brooks, Ph.D. is an Assistant Professor in the Counseling Psychology Program at Tennessee State University where he is the Coordinator of the M.S. program and serves as a core faculty member of the Ph.D. program. Dr. Brooks earned his doctorate in the Counseling Psychology program from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. His research interests include interracial relationships, multiracial families, and multicultural counseling.

Chalandra M. Bryant, Ph.D. is a Professor of Human Development and Family Science at the University of Georgia. Dr. Bryant earned her doctorate from the University of Texas—Austin. She completed a 2-year National Institutes of Mental Health (NIMH) post-doctoral fellowship. She teaches courses in family development, family theories, and intimate relationships. Her research focuses on close relationships and the manner in which social, familial, economic, and psychosocial factors are linked to marital and health outcomes.

JahRael V. Burrell, Ph.D. is an Assistant professor and Program Coordinator for Human Services at Hopkinsville Community College. A graduate of Kansas State University, his work focused on the hegemonic influences among sex, gender, and ethnicities in the United States, sexual identity, social movements, social justice, race/ethnicity, violence, and poverty. His working background includes positions as Instructor/Assistant Professor at Kansas State University Southern University at New Orleans, LA; Murray State University at Murray, KY; and Lindsey Wilson College at Columbia, KY.

Annamaria Csizmadia, Ph.D. is Associate Professor of Human Development and Family Studies (HDFS) at the University of Connecticut. She studies ethnic-racial identity, racial socialization, and social-emotional development in ethnic-racial minority, specifically multiracial and immigrant, children. Her work on these topics has been published in Family Relations, Social Development, Parenting: Sciences and Practice, Journal of Marriage and Family, Journal of Black Psychology, and Maternal and Child Health Journal. Additionally, she has published book chapters on interracial families and multi-ethnic and multiracial marriages. She teaches courses on diversity, adolescence, research methods, and early and middle childhood. Dr. Csizmadia is on the Editorial Board of Journal of Marriage and Family, Journal of Youth and Adolescence, and Journal of Family Psychology. She earned her Ph.D. and master's degrees from the University of Missouri and her undergraduate degree from the University of Trier, Germany.

Fabienne Doucet, Ph.D. is Associate Professor of Early Childhood Education in the Department of Teaching and Learning at the NYU Steinhardt School of Culture, Education, and Human Development. Born in Spain, raised in Haiti, and migrating to the USA at the age of ten, Doucet embodies a hybrid identity that is mirrored in her interdisciplinary approach to examining how immigrant and US-born children of color and their families navigate education in the USA. A critical ethnographer, Doucet specifically studies how taken-for-granted beliefs, practices, and values in the US educational system position linguistically, culturally, and socioeconomically diverse children and families at a disadvantage, and seeks active solutions for meeting their educational needs. Doucet has a Ph.D. in Human Development and Family Studies from UNC-Greensboro. She was a postdoctoral fellow at the Harvard Graduate School of Education with fellowships from the National Science Foundation and National Academy of Education/Spencer Foundation.

Jeneé C. Duncan, M.S. is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Human Development and Family Science at the University of Georgia. Jenee's research interests include couple and co-parenting relationship processes and functioning, with a particular interest on African American couples and parents. She is also interested in how family life education may promote resiliency with these families.

Melissa Giraud, M.Ed. is the Co-founder/Director of EmbraceRace, a community of adults supporting each other to raise a generation of kids who are brave, informed, and proactive on matters of race and racial justice. Professionally, she has been most interested in supporting learning and life outcomes for underserved students and families, especially immigrant girls and girls of color. Those driving concerns have shaped her work as an educator, radio producer, education strategist, and now as a co-founder of EmbraceRace.

Vanessa Gonlin is a doctoral student and Diversity Fellow in the Department of Sociology at Texas A&M University. Her research interests include analyzing trends in multiracial identity, identity formation, and racial ideology within interracial partners. Gonlin has worked with administrators and peers to design and facilitate discussions intended to enhance campus race relations, and he has served as a mentor and research trainer for underrepresented graduate and undergraduate students.

Marcella Runell Hall, Ph.D. is a mama to two amazing daughters, a wife and partner and an author of essays and curriculum related to social justice education. She is also currently serving as Vice President for Student Life and Dean of Students at Mount Holyoke College. She has a bachelor's degree from Ramapo College of New Jersey, a master's degree from New York University and a doctorate from University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Her next project is called Uncommon Bonds: Women Reflect on Race and Friendship (Peter Lang, 2018) with Kersha Smith.

Henry L. Harris, Ph.D. is a Professor and Chair of the Department of Counseling at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. He received his master's degree in School Counseling from the University North Carolina at Chapel Hill 1986 and his Ph.D. in Counseling, with a specialization in Sports Psychology, from the University of Virginia in 1996. He is also a Licensed Professional Counselor (LPC), a former high school counselor, and United States Air Force military veteran.

Katie M. Hrapczynski, Ph.D. is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Family Studies and Community Development at Towson University. She received her Ph.D. in Family Science and M.S. in Marriage and Family Therapy from the University of Maryland. Dr. Hrapczynski's research examines family processes conducive to promoting youth and family well-being in adoptive families with a primary focus on transracial adoption. She teaches courses on family relationships, services for children and youth, and family science research methods. Her scholarly and teaching activities are largely informed by her experiences in the human services and practice as a couple and family therapist.

Sean Graham Jefferson, Ph.D. is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Child and Family Studies at the University of Louisiana at Lafayette. He received his Ph.D. in Educational Psychology, with a concentration in human development and family studies, from the University of North Texas in 2017. His research focuses on examining the self-respect of emerging adults, championing interpersonal relationships through addressing issues regarding emotional intelligence, and extinguishing group-level social injustice and social inequality through challenging public policy.

Katie W. Lamberson, Ph.D. is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Counseling at the University of North Georgia. Dr. Lamberson received her Doctorate in Counseling and Counselor Education from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She currently teaches courses in addictions, ethics, and family counseling.

Leigh A. Leslie, Ph.D. is an Associate Professor in the Department of Family Science at the University of Maryland. She holds a Ph.D. from the Pennsylvania State University with apre-doctoral internship in clinical-community psychology from Yale University, School of Medicine. She is the author of numerous book chapters and over 40 scholarly articles focusing on family functioning and mental health. Specific foci include social support, gender issues in families, and interracial families. She teaches courses in marriage and family therapy, cultural competency, and gender. Dr. Leslie is a licensed psychologist and a marriage and family therapist.

Jeremy Lynch, Ph.D. is a practicing psychologist in the Nashville and Middle Tennessee area. Dr. Lynch earned his Ph.D. in Counseling Psychology from Tennessee State University. His research interests relate to multicultural competence and quality assurance in an integrated behavioral health settings.

Clare P. Merlin, Ph.D. is an Assistant Professor at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. A former school counselor, she earned her doctorate in Counselor Education and Supervision from the College of William & Mary. Her primary area of research is focused on school counselors and multicultural education.

Farrell J. Webb, Ph.D. is Professor and Dean of the College of Health and Human Development at the California State University, Northridge. Dr. Webb worked at California State University, Los Angeles, as Professor and Associate Dean and as an Associate Professor at Kansas State University in the School of Family Studies and Human Services for 20 years. He specializes in data analyses and statistics along with the social correlates of well-being, which include race, sex, gender, ethnicity, economics, poverty, and social stratification.

Susan White is currently a graduate student in the Clinical Mental Health Counseling program at Southern Connecticut State University. She earned her B.A. in Psychology and minor in Women's, Gender, and Sexuality studies from the University of Connecticut in May 2017. Her research interests focus on multicultural issues, diversity, and mental health. After completing her master's degree, she plans to further her graduate studies and pursue a doctoral training in psychology.

Jennifer L. Young, M.S., M.A. is a doctoral student in the Department of Family Science at the University of Maryland. She has an M.A. in Chinese Language and Culture from the Ohio State University and an M.S. in Couples and Family Therapy from University of Maryland. Jennifer herself is biracial, and her interests center around interracial couple relationships and developing culturally sensitive mental health interventions. She has a Predoctoral Fellowship at the National Cancer Institute where she conducts psychosocial research on families coping with genetic cancer syndromes. In 2017, Jennifer was named Outstanding Graduate Assistant by the University of Maryland and has previously published on interracial couples in therapy.