Masters of Peace is a book series edited by the University of Innsbruck's UNESCO Chair for Peace Studies. It has been founded to honour outstanding works of young academics in the field of Peace and Conflict Studies. It is reserved for selected Master theses of the Innsbruck School and published twice a year. The Innsbruck School follows the principles of Transrational Peace Philosophy. It defines peace as a plural and regards all aspects of human nature relevant for the understanding of peace and conflict. Its applied method is Elicitive Conflict Transformation, a pragmatic approach to conflict rooted in Humanistic Psychology that entrusts the responsibility for finding alternative options of behaviour, communication and encounter to the conflict parties. Facilitators provide a safe frame, tools and methods for this quest without imposing their own solutions on the parties.

My heartfelt thanks to

Wolfgang for his pioneer spirit and for having given me the space for this profound thesis journey, which became as fruitful as I always dreamed academia could be. Dr. Christian Jacobi on behalf of Rotary for their financial support. Jenny for bringing me on track. Josefina for being an inspiration on the way. Katharina for helping me to find my voice through creative writing. All authors mentioned in here for sharing their wisdom. Reini Hauser for enriching this book with his profound experiences. Valentina, Sami, Fabienne and Manuel for their trust and openness. Ellen, Beth and Thibault for their kind and thorough language boost. Susanne and Dr. Anke Vogel for the time and diligence they put into formatting this book. Nadja for your kind generosity. My friends for surrounding me with a rainbow of beauty and support. My parents for their endless care and love. Michi for being a mirror, my muse and so much more.
