The previous parts titled Points of Departure and Building Blocks described the conditions for developing future images of sustainable cities. In this part, the actual images are described. They are a product of a large number of smaller project meetings and some workshops with more participants. In this work, we have defined six images of the future that are separated by the dimensions urban structure and tempo. There are three structures – Urban Cores, Suburban Centers and Low-rise settlements, and two tempi – Fast and Slow.