

PART III.

POSTSCRIPTUM.

The natural man is impatient with doubt and suspense:
he impatiently hurries to be shut of it. A disciplined mind takes delight in the problematic, and cherishes it until a way out is found that approves itself upon examination

John Dewey