ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book is a thorough revision and extension of my Ph.D. dissertation from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. First and foremost, therefore, I would like to thank my adviser Kenneth Wexler for his help, advice and encouragement. I am also grateful to David Pesetsky, a member of my dissertation committee, for his guidance and important suggestions throughout my work. Thanks are also due to Steven Pinker and Suzanne Carey for their comments on earlier versions of my dissertation.

I would like to thank my teachers at Brandeis University and MIT: Noam Chomsky, Jane Grimshaw, Kenneth Hale, Irene Heim, James Higginbotham, Ray Jackendoff, Alec Marantz, Molley Potter, Alan Prince, Tanya Reinhart, Edgar Zurif.

Several projects reported in this book were conducted in collaboration with Stella Ceytlin, Stephen Crain, Jennifer Cunningham, Jennifer Green, Stuart Lubarsky, Rozalind Thornton. Their friendship and help are also much appreciated. I am grateful to Josef Aoun, Maria Babyonyshev, Roelien Bastianse, Peter Coopmans, Martin Everaert, Danny Fox, Herman Kolk, Howard Lasnik, Orin Percus, Colin Phillips, Eric Reuland, and Maaïke Verrips for their comments on various parts of this book, and would like to thank my former colleagues at University of Pennsylvania and my colleagues at Yale University: Stephen Anderson, Lila Gleitman, Louis Goldstein, Laurence Horn, Stanley Insler, Dianne Jonas, Abigail Kaun, Ellen Prince. Very special thanks are due to Maarten Janssen for his assistance in my continuous struggle with the word processor. The recommendations of anonymous reviewers have greatly aided me in the preparation of this book.

At various stages, I was supported in part by a National Institute of Health research grant P50 DC 00081 and a grant from the International Research and Exchanges Board with funds provided by the National Endowment for the Humanities, the US Department of State, and the US Information Agency. None of these organisations is responsible for the views expressed.

And, of course, to Dasha and Matvei -- many thanks for making my life more interesting!
