Acknowledgements

This book is the published version of my Ph.D. thesis, completed in the School of GeoSciences, University of Edinburgh in 2013. I would like to thank the University of Edinburgh and China Scholarship Council for providing a joint studentship so I could undertake my Ph.D. research. I would also like to thank the National Natural Science Foundation of China for providing an early career research grant (Grant No. 41401139) so that I have been able to continue my exploration of urban public in China in the aftermath of my Ph.D. study. Chapters 3–7 of this book have been previously published as: Qian, 2014, Geography Compass; Qian, 2014, City & Community; Qian, 2017, Urban Geography; Qian, 2014, European Journal of Cultural Studies; and Qian, 2015, Urban Studies. I am thankful to the publishers of these articles for kindly permitting me to reproduce them here.

I would like to thank my three supervisors in Edinburgh, Jane M Jacobs, Tom Slater and Eric Laurier, who, with their incredible acumen in theoretical thinking and empirical analysis, and vast knowledge in urban geography and cultural studies, supported me all the way through the writing up of the thesis. Jane was my principal supervisor for the first year. Her supervision contributed largely to the theoretical foundation and direction of this research, and she kept giving instructions to my fieldwork even after she was relocated to Singapore. Tom had been supervising my research since the very start of my Ph.D. and became my principal supervisor upon Jane's leave. Eric joined my supervisory team at the beginning of the second year. Tom, Eric and I worked closely to undergo each chapter that I wrote, and their priceless advices and critiques did me a great favour to improve this thesis. This experience will be forever cherished.

The support from Prof. Hong Zhu, South China Normal University, and Prof. Shenjing He, The University of Hong Kong has been essential to my Ph.D. research. Both have been supervising my research since my undergraduate study in Sun Yat-sen University, and they gave me invaluable instructions and guidance during my fieldwork in Guangzhou and later in the process of writing up. I owe a lot to the financial support provided by the Centre of Cultural Industry and Cultural Geography, South China Normal University, which is now directed by Prof. Zhu.

The two special issues edited by Shenjing also provided me valuable chances to share my research findings with broader intellectual communities.

Finally, I would like to thank all the participants involved in this project. This book is dedicated to you, and the city both you and I have profoundly loved, with every bit and beat of our hearts.
