

Japanese Imperialism in Contemporary English Fiction

Ching-chih Wang

Japanese Imperialism
in Contemporary English Fiction

From Dejima to Malaya

palgrave
macmillan

Ching-chih Wang
National Taipei University
New Taipei City, Taiwan

ISBN 978-981-15-0461-7 ISBN 978-981-15-0462-4 (eBook)
<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-981-15-0462-4>

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2019

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, expressed or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Cover illustration: © Melisa Hasan

This Palgrave Pivot imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Singapore Pte Ltd.

The registered company address is: 152 Beach Road, #21-01/04 Gateway East, Singapore 189721, Singapore

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many people have supported me during the course of this study, which is the result of several research projects conducted over the past five years. My utmost gratitude goes to Professor Yucheng Lee for his guidance and knowledge of contemporary English literature. His constant support and his comments on my rough ideas have made this book possible.

As a scholar of Contemporary English Literature studying Japanese Imperialism in Taiwan, I am particularly indebted to Mr. Hideyuki Yamamoto, full professor at National Kobe University and president of the AALA (Asian American Literature Association), for his generosity and kindness in hosting me as a visiting scholar at the Graduate School of Humanities in the summer of 2012. I was privileged to have some thought-provoking discussions with him and other prestigious members of the AALA in Japan, particularly the honorable first president of the AALA, Ms. Teruyo Ueki, who is currently professor emeritus at Kobe Women's University.

Research grants from the MOST (Ministry of Science and Technology) in Taiwan enabled me to launch this project, while timely financial support from the USTP (University System of Taipei Joint Research Program) helped me finalize the manuscript. Chapter 2, "Riches and Realities: The Uncommon Wealth in David Mitchell's The Thousand Autumns of Jacob de Zoet" is the closing report of my MOST project from 2013 to 2015, "In the Name of Gaijin: Writing Alienation in The Thousand of Autumns of Jacob de Zoet" (102-2410-H-305-069). My study of David Mitchell's Dejima story was inspired by an invitation from Nagasaki University, where I presented some preliminary findings at the “Eighth International Symposium for Port Cities Studies: Historical Experience of Port Cities/Conceptions of Socio-Cultural Coexistence in East Asia” held in 2012. Chapter 3 is also the closing report of my 2017 USTP project, “Cultural Trauma and Civil Repair in Kazuo Ishiguro’s Stories of Shanghai” (USTP-NTPU-TMU-106-01), an extension of the conference paper presented in the special session, “Kazuo Ishiguro and Trans-Bordering Asian British/American Literature,” for the AALA annual meeting chaired by Professor Hideyuki Yamamoto at Kobe University in 2018. The other two essays, “A Network of Deceptions: Re-membering Violence in The Garden of Evening Mists,” published in the Soochow Journal of Foreign Languages and Cultures 45 (2018), and “The Imperial Garden’s Monogatari: Politics of Forgetting in Tan Twan Eng’s The Garden of Evening Mists,” written in Chinese and published in the Review of English and American Literature 33 (2018), were also the closing reports of my 2016 USTP project (USTP-NTPU-TMU-105-01) and have been incorporated into Chapter 4. In both of these journal papers, I benefited greatly from the reviews of anonymous readers; their insights into the representation of traumatic memory and their knowledge of Japanese imperialism helped sharpen my argument about the politics of remembering and forgetting.

Finally, I would like to express my deepest gratitude to my husband, Chun Fu, for his patience and companionship at different stages of my academic career. As a perceptive colleague, he has provided constant, attentive feedback, and sustained my study during many periods of doubt and fatigue. As a caring and loving spouse, he shared both my excitement and my frustration in writing this book, while also sharing the responsibility for raising our adorable ten-year-old daughter, Ying Fu. It is to him and my daughter that this book is dedicated.

Taipei
2019

Ching-chih Wang

CONTENTS

| | | |
|---|--|----|
| 1 | Introduction: Japanese Empire as an Excess of Imperialism | 1 |
| 2 | Riches and Realities: The Uncommon Wealth in David Mitchell's The Thousand Autumns of Jacob de Zoet | 13 |
| 3 | The "Broader Canvas" in Kazuo Ishiguro's Pacific War Stories | 31 |
| 4 | Inscribing the Legacy of Japanese Imperialism in The Garden of Evening Mists | 55 |
| 5 | Conclusion: Borrowing Scenes from Japan's Colonial Empire | 79 |
| | Works Cited | 83 |
| | Index | 89 |