NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

İdil Akıncı is an Early Career Teaching and Research Fellow at the University of Edinburgh. She holds a PhD in Migration Studies from the University of Sussex (2018), where she explored the everyday experiences of national identity and citizenship by young Arab migrant communities and Emirati citizens in Dubai. Her research interests and experience centre around the issues of national identity, citizenship, and belonging, with a focus on the Gulf states.

Nermin Allam is Assistant Professor of Politics at Rutgers University-Newark. Before joining Rutgers, Allam held a Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada postdoctoral fellowship at Princeton University. Allam holds a Doctorate of Philosophy in International Relations and Comparative Politics from the University of Alberta, Canada.

Emanuela Buscemi holds a PhD in Sociology from the University of Aberdeen (Scotland) and teaches at the University of Monterrey (Mexico). She is affiliated with CEFAS, French Center of Archaeology and Social Science, Kuwait. She previously taught at the American University of Kuwait (AUK). She conducted fieldwork in Kuwait and Mexico. Her research interests focus on alternative social movements, informal activism and resistance, identity, gender politics, communities and belonging. She is co-editing a volume on quotidian youth cultures in the Gulf and publishing her dissertation on Kuwaiti women's cultural and political engagement in the post-Arab Spring.

Gilla Camden is a doctoral researcher in Comparative Politics at the School of Government and International Affairs and the Centre for Institutions and Political Behaviour at Durham University in Durham, UK. She holds an MA in Arabic and a BA in Arabic Language, Literature, and Linguistics from Georgetown University in Washington, DC, USA. Her research interests include the political economy of gender, voting choice and patterns, political culture, social policy, and civil engagement in the Arab-speaking world, specifically the Gulf region.

Betul Dogan Akkas is a PhD candidate of the joint degree program between Qatar University Gulf Studies Center and Durham University School of Government and International Affairs. She also got her MA degree with the thesis titled “Securitization of Qatari Foreign Policy” at Qatar University. Dogan Akkas completed her BA in International Relations from Bilkent University. Her research interests include foreign policy making, security, and social transformation of the Gulf countries.

Roberto Fabbri is an architect, researcher and professor at the University of Monterrey (Mexico). As a former United Nations Development Programme consultant, he participated in the Kuwait National Museum rehabilitation project and completed the transformation of the American Missionary Hospital into an exhibition centre (2012 Aga Khan Award for Architecture nomination). He contributed to international conferences, recently in Yale, GRM Cambridge, MESA and INHA-Paris and published extensively on journals such as Domus, Faces-Journal d’Architecture and International Journal of Islamic Architecture. He released two books on Max Bill (Mondadori 2011; in Folio 2017) and co-authored the double-volume Modern Architecture Kuwait 1949–1989 (Niggli 2015, 2017).

Hala Guta is Assistant Professor of Mass Communication at Qatar University, Qatar. She holds a PhD in Mass Communication from Ohio University. Her research interests include international communication; gendered communication; communication for social change; and the intersection of communication, culture, and identity. Her publications and conference presentations include papers on the role of media in gender negation and expression, the role of culture in communication, the role of communication in peace building in societies emerging from conflict, and the role media and other cultural institutions play in social change and the construction of identity.

Nesrien Hamid is an independent researcher and translator based in New York City. She recently completed a Master's degree in Middle Eastern Studies from the Graduate Center, City University of New York. She has a BA in Foreign Affairs from the University of Virginia, and will soon commence her doctoral studies, where she will focus her research on the GCC states, specifically contemporary Saudi Arabia.

Nesibe Hicret Battaloglu is a PhD candidate in the Department of Area Studies at Middle East Technical University (METU). She obtained her Master's degree in 2014 from Qatar University Gulf Studies program with a thesis entitled "A Comparison of Turkey and Iran's Soft Power in the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC)". Her research interests concern international relations of the GCC states, Gulf politics and identities.

Sarah Hopkyns is an assistant professor in the College of Education at Zayed University, Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates. She holds a PhD in Educational Research in the discipline of Applied Linguistics from the University of Leicester, UK. Her research interests include English as a global language, Emirati cultural identities, multilingualism, linguistic hybridity, and English as a medium of instruction (EMI). She has disseminated her research widely through international conference presentations as well as publications. She is the principal investigator (PI) of a funded research cluster on the pedagogical and sociological implications of EMI.

Magdalena Karolak holds a PhD in Linguistics from the University of Silesia, Poland and is Associate Professor of Humanities and Social Sciences at Zayed University, UAE. Her research interests include transformations of societies in the Arabian Gulf and comparative linguistics. Dr. Karolak has authored more than 40 journal articles and book chapters on the shifting gender relations, social media, culture and identity, and political system transformations in the Gulf Cooperation Council countries.

Annalisa Pavan is Professor of International Policies on Education at the University of Padova, Italy. After publishing books and editing volumes on the EU and UNESCO policies on education for over a decade, she has elected Saudi Arabian higher education policies, with a specific interest in Saudi government-funded scholarship programs for studying abroad as a main research focus. The scope of her most recent research and publications has expanded to include ongoing socio-political and cultural changes in Saudi Arabia, the image of the Kingdom in Western media, and Kuwaiti and Emirati overseas scholarship programs.
