The Impacts of NAFTA on North America
PREVIOUS PUBLICATIONS

By Other Means, For Other Ends: Bush’s Re-Election Reassessed. Coedited with José Luis Valdés-Ugalde. (2005)

The Impacts of NAFTA on North America

Challenges outside the Box

Edited by Imtiaz Hussain
Contents

List of Tables vii
Acknowledgments ix
List of Contributors xi

One  Introduction: Beneath, Beyond, or Within North America’s Regional Box: Paradigm Indigestion? 1
Imtiaz Hussain

Two  North America’s Regionalisms Face Globalism: Integrating Climate Change Responses 21
Marcela López-Vallejo Olvera

Three  Mexico-Canada Biotech Image: The Role of the Broader Scientific Community 39
Edit Antal and Camelia Tigau

Four  North American Anti-Immigration Rhetorics: Continental Circulation and Global Resonance of Discursive Integration 63
Liette Gilbert

Five  Integration through NAFTA’s Chapter 11: Eroding Federalism and Regionalism? 93
Ian McKinley

Daniel Drache

Seven  Three Amigos and a Nonregional Player: China as a Challenge Inside and Outside the NAFTA Box 123
Francisco Haro Navejas

Eight  Natural Resources and Out-Migration in Local Communities of Southern Mexico: Non-NAFTA Issues Impacting NAFTA 141
Alba González Jácome
Contents

Nine  Gendering NAFTA: Utopian Vision?  159
Rebecka Villanueva Ulfgard

Ten  Developing National and International Civic Engagement Networks: The International Consortium for Higher Education, Civic Responsibility, and Democracy 181
Frank Plantan, Jr.

Eleven  North American Integration and Recession: Paradigm Change?  209
Imtiaz Hussain

Tim Lynch and Paul Michael Cox

Thirteen  Conclusion: Rising to the Occasion: Coordinating Tumult  253
Imtiaz Hussain

Index  259
Tables

1.1 Overviewing the Volume 5
1.2 Key Findings in Theoretical Setting 12
3.1 Actors Subject to Comparative Studies 45
3.2 Formal Webpage Analysis, according to Data Registered between October 1 and November 24, 2008 54
4.1 Total Count of Keywords in Newspapers Database 66
4.2 Countries, Number of Refugees, and Acceptance Rate (2007) 75
7.1 Main U.S. Trade Partner Deficit, September 2008 126
8.1 Fauna from Forested and Flooded Areas: Tabasco and Campeche (1950–2007) 148
13.1 Chapter Findings in Theoretical Setting 254
Acknowledgments

On behalf of my colleagues who have contributed to this volume, I would like to thank the Canadian government for supplying a grant to facilitate a conference on “Non-NAFTA Issues Impacting NAFTA: Challenges Outside the Box,” during the last week of October 2008. In particular, Luis Archundia and Pierre Sved, the successive coordinators of Academic Affairs at the Mexico City Canadian Embassy, offered a lot of help, for which we are very grateful. David Mena Aleman, my department director, also facilitated the conference with resources of many a kind; and to him my thanks. Several of my research assistants also extended help in many ways: Luis Mingo, Andrea Navarro, Carlos Tornel, and Jessica Beitman. My appreciation goes to each, as too to Luis’s brother, Ignacious, for designing the cover. Finally, I thank Farideh Koohi-Kamali, and Robyn Curtis at Palgrave Macmillan, New York, as well as Rohini Krishnan and her capable staff in Chennai, India. They have been very supportive and a joy to work with.

Needless to say, I alone remain responsible for errors and lapses.

Imtiaz Hussain
Mexico City
May 2010
Contributors

Edit Antal is Tenured Professor and Researcher at the Center for Research on North America (CISAN) in the National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM). She studied social science, economics, and philosophy of science and has a PhD in international relations. She teaches in Postgraduate Program in Political and Social Sciences at UNAM on international environmental, science and technology politics. She is also a member of National Research System in Mexico. In the 1980s and 1990s she studied the process of transition in Eastern Europe and Russia, publishing a book entitled Chronicle of a Disintegration. Over the past 15 years, she focused on European Union-United States comparative studies, as well as NAFTA, emphasizing environmental and science-related topics. She authored Climate Change: Disagreement between the U.S. and Europe, and edited other books on North American cooperation. She is currently working on a book on scientific and environmental cooperation between NAFTA countries.

Paul Michael Cox is presently the World Health Organization (WHO) Project Leader for the Rapid Containment of Pandemic Influenza Project and a WHO Event Manager. Mr. Cox joined the WHO in 2005 as the Emergency Planning and Pandemic Preparedness Officer at the WHO Western Pacific Regional Office in Manila. In 2007, he was assigned to WHO headquarters in Geneva. Prior to joining WHO, for over 10 years, Mr. Cox was responsible for planning and response for the full range of Health Emergencies, from managing public health and hospital emergencies, to being responsible for managing National and International Public Health events. He was the Director of the Emergency Operations Centre at the British Columbia Centre for Disease Control during SARS in 2003 as well as more recently one of the core Event Managers in WHO headquarters during the Pandemic of 2009.

Daniel Drache is Associate Director of the Robarts Centre for Canadian Studies and Full Professor of Political Science at York University. His work focuses on understanding the changing character of the globalization narrative in its economic, social, and cultural dimensions. His 2008 book, Defiant Publics: The Unprecedented Reach of the Global Citizen (London: Polity), looks at the evolving responses from states, social movements and private sector actors to global governance and the increasing role of microactivists and social movements in public policy formation. He has worked extensively on the WTO’s failed Doha Round with particular focus on TRIPS and public health, food security and nutrition, and poverty eradication. Another vital interest is North American integration and border security (Big Picture Realities: Canada and Mexico at the Crossroads [published by Wilfrid Laurier Press, 2008]) and the impact of new information technologies and the ways in which micropublics have employed these technologies in innovative ways. For more information go to his home page www.yorku.ca/drache

Liette Gilbert is Associate Professor, PhD Coordinator and Associate Dean at the Faculty of Environmental Studies at York University in Toronto, Canada. She holds a doctoral degree in Urban Planning from the University of California, Los Angeles. Her research examines the marginalizing and criminalizing processes link to immigration politics in North America. Current research projects include the expansion of border politics into municipal governance in the United States and Canada, the neoliberalization and media representations of immigration and multiculturalism, and a collaborative research on immigrants/refugees perceptions of public spaces/institutions. Her work focuses particularly on the discrepancies between policy, practices, and ideologies of immigration, multiculturalism, and citizenship. Her previous research has examined environmentalism in urban, suburban, and exurban regions as well as citizen participation in planning processes.

Alba González Jácome is Professor Emeritus in the Department of Political and Social Sciences at Universidad Iberoamericana. A noted anthropologist belonging to Mexico’s exclusive Society of National Scholars at its highest level (Level 3), she has authored several books and articles on the changing nature of Mexico’s agricultural and rural communities under neoliberalism, many reflecting her direct fieldwork. She has won several fellowships and conducts research projects profusely. Among her recent publications are Los Nuevos Caminos de la Agricultura. Procesos de conversión y perspectivas (with Silvia del Amo y Francisco Gurri); Los nuevos caminos del desarrollo en América Latina (with Juan Maestre Alfonso and Ángel Casas Gragea); Humedales del suroeste de Tlaxcala. Agua y agricultura en el siglo
XX en México (México: UIA and El Colegio de Historia de Tlaxcala, 2008); and Historias Varias. Un viaje en el tiempo con los agricultores mexicanos (México: UIA, CSIC-Sevilla, 2008).

Francisco Haro has taught Chinese Foreign Policy at El Colegio de México (PhD Program of the Centro de Estudios de Asia y África). He has been teaching undergraduate courses both on Asia and International Negotiation in the International Studies Department at Universidad Iberoamericana. Some of his works are The People's Republic of China in Central America and the Caribbean: International Policies based on Symbolic, Political and Material Interests; El dominio de las emociones: percepciones mexicanas sobre China, China en la formación y evolución de la política exterior mexicana, 1899–1972; Beijing frente a las “minorías nacionales”: la fe grande y las fes pequeñas, La identidad como eje del conflicto Beijing-Taipei; International Relations among Tom Thumbs: Taiwan as Provider of Aid in Central America; Constructing Chinese Identity; Al asalto del Olimpo: deporte, identidad y género en la República Popular China; and Comercio y cooperación: estrategias taiwanesas de inserción internacional.

Marcela López-Vallejo Olvera obtained her MA degree in “North American Studies” at Universidad de las Américas, Puebla in the year 2001. She also finished the MA in “Regional Studies, Environment and Development” at Universidad Iberoamericana Golfo-Centro, also in Puebla. She had been professor of International Relations at Universidad de las Américas, Puebla for seven years, and worked in the federal government at the Secretaría de Relaciones Exteriores and at the Secretaría de Educación Pública, as well as for the international lobby firm Burson-Marsteller Mexico, as junior associate for energy projects. More recently, Marcela worked in environmental management projects for several universities and communities. Nowadays, she is a part-time professor at Benemérita Universidad Autónoma de Puebla and has obtained her doctoral candidacy at Universidad de las Américas, Puebla. Her research lines deal with environment, climate change in a post-Kyoto era for North America, federalism, and local diplomacy of subnational entities across North America.

Tim Lynch is a researcher/freelance journalist resident in Vancouver, Canada. He founded Info-Lynk Consulting in 1985 where he worked on projects around health services reimbursement and health technology assessment. Over the past decade he has conducted Quality Management analysis of first responder management practices in support of hazard mitigation. Through his journalistic endeavors he has researched and written about maritime border security between nations. He has authored many policy papers on health and social service delivery, published on hospital utilization review, finite resource management, risk management, information systems, health policy formulation, health futures, and physician reimbursement; and holds an MSc in health services research from the University of Toronto and a BSc in biochemistry from the University of London.

Ian McKinley is a high school teacher of English and Social Sciences at a private bilingual institute in Puebla, Mexico. He studied his first three years of his undergraduate degree in International Relations at the Universidad de las Americas, Puebla, after which time he transferred back to the University of Colorado, in his hometown of Boulder. He finished his degree in International Affairs in May 2007. In August of that same year he returned to the Universidad de las Americas to earn his Master’s degree in North American Studies from the Department of Political Science, which he obtained in May 2009. He has one publication: “The Bayview irrigation district v. Mexico case: an evaluation of NAFTA Chapter 11,” ed., Imtiaz Hussain and published by the Universidad Iberoamericana. He is currently submitting applications to law schools in the United States and intends to begin studying law in August 2010.

Frank Plantan, Jr. serves as the Co-Director of the International Relations Program at the University of Pennsylvania. He is the President and Executive Director of Sigma Iota Rho, the Honor Society for International Studies. He serves as the Director of the Penn-in-Seoul Study Abroad and Internship Program and as the Executive Secretary of the International Consortium for Higher Education, Civic Responsibility and Democracy and as the General Rapporteur for the Council of Europe on the Universities as Sites of Citizenship project. He consults on international programs and was a keynote speaker at the China-U.S. Education Summit in Beijing in August 2005. As a University Fellow at Kyung Hee University in Korea, he served on the planning and steering committee for the KHU-U.N. World Civic Forum 2009. He has a PhD in Higher Education and Master’s in International Relations (University of Pennsylvania) and a Bachelor’s degree in Political Science (Illinois State University).

Camelia Tigau has a PhD in Social and Political Studies. At present, she is a full-time researcher in the Area of Integration Studies at the Center of North American Studies, National Autonomous University of Mexico. She has been a lecturer at the Faculty of Social and Political Science at UNAM, at undergraduate and graduate levels. Between 1997 and 2002, she worked as a journalist and cultural secretary at the Mexican Embassy in Romania. She is the author of the book Diplomacy in the Digital Age: Food Aid as a Neoliberal Maneuver (UNAM/CISAN and Cenzontle, 2009). Some of her academic works are: “CMO Public Diplomacy for Biosafety in Mexico: applications of a hierarchical model of communication,” Place Branding and Public Diplomacy (Palgrave, 2009), 5:1, 38–53, with Edit Antal, and “Track 2 Innovation Agents in North America: the view from Mexico,” Norteamérica 3, no. 2 (June–December 2008), 43–66. E-mail: ctigau@unam.mx

Rebecka Villanueva Ulfgard received her PhD in Political Science from Växjö University, Sweden, in 2005. Previously, she studied at Lund University, Institut d’Etudes Politiques in Strasbourg, and College of Europe in Bruges. She has held positions at Växjö University (doctoral studies), Linköping University (Investigator), and Karlstad University (acting Assistant Professor). Since 2008 she is a full-time Researcher-Lecturer at the Department for International Cooperation and Development Studies, Instituto de Investigaciones Dr. José María Luis Mora, Mexico City, where she lectures on European Union Development Cooperation, globalization, and theories of International Relations. She is also part-time Lecturer at the Department for International Studies, Universidad Iberoamericana, teaching classes on Europe-European Union and International Relations theories. The influence of norms in European and international relations, more specifically aspects of norm (mis)use and instrumentality, compliance and political crisis management are concepts that lie at the heart of her research agenda.