Acknowledgements

This volume is the result of the session ‘Monetary Policy in the Peripheries under the Gold Standard’ at the XV World Economic History Conference in Utrecht, in August 2009. The editors would like to thank the many participants that took part in the lively discussion and provided valuable suggestions for the authors. We would especially like to thank Pablo Martín-Aceña and Jaime Reis, who edited a previous work on the issue of monetary regimes in the periphery (Monetary Standards in the Periphery. Paper, Silver and Gold 1854–1933 (2000) London: Macmillan) for their help and encouragement.

A one-day pre-conference workshop was held in August 2008 at the Norwegian School of Economics, Bergen. We would like to take this opportunity to thank Clemens Jobst (Austrian National Bank), Sophia Lazaretou (Bank of Greece), Øyvind Eitrheim (Norges Bank) and Jan Tore Klovland (Norwegian School of Economics) for sharing their insights with us.

Both the workshop and conference session received financial support from the Norges Bank Bicentenary Project 1816–2016, which we acknowledge with gratitude.

Anders is also grateful for funding provided by the Bank of Sweden Tercentenary Foundation and the Jan Wallander and Tom Hedelius Foundation.

Finally, the two editors would like to thank their families for their forbearance and support.

Notes on the Contributors

Pablo Martin-Aceña is Professor of Economics and Economic History at the University of Alcalá (Madrid). He has been visiting scholar at the Karl Marx University of Economics (Budapest), Harvard University (Boston, MA), Leuven University (Leuven, Belgium), El Colegio de Mexico (Mexico City), Université Paris VII, L’Institute de Sciences Politiques (Paris), and the University of Cambridge. His research interest focuses mainly on monetary and financial history. His latest English publications are The Economic Development in Spain since 1870 (with J. Simpson, Edward Elgar, London, 1995) and Monetary Standards in the Periphery (with Jaime Reis, Macmillan Press, 2000). He is also editor of 150 Years in the History of the Bank of Spain (Banco de España, Madrid, 2006). He is former editor of the Revista de Historia Económica, and presently is President of the Spanish Economic History Association.

Kalina Dimitrova has been working for the Monetary History Program at the Bulgarian National Bank as a member and coordinator of the South-Eastern European Monetary History Network (SEEMHN) since 2007. Previously, she worked at the Research Department of the Bulgarian National Bank for six years. The SEEMHN is an initiative of the central banks in the region, created to bring together economists, historians and central bankers to shed more light on past monetary developments in a pan-European economic context. Her research interests vary from macroeconomics, monetary theory and financial stability issues to forecasting experimental markets. In line with her activities in the SEEMHN, her recent publications are dedicated to the transition from bimetallism to the gold standard, interwar monetary stabilization and the exchange control system.

Luca Fantacci is Assistant Professor of Economic History at Bocconi University, Milan. He is the author of La moneta. Storia di un’istituzione mancata [Money. History of a Failed Institution] (Marsilio, Venice, 2005), co-editor with Massimo Amato and Luigi Doria of Money and Calculation. Economic and Sociological Perspectives (Palgrave, Basingstoke, 2010) and co-author (with Massimo Amato) of The End of Finance (Polity, 2011). In addition, he has authored several articles on monetary and financial history and, more recently, on the thought and activities of J. M. Keynes.
Ola Honningdal Grytten is Professor in Economic History at the Norwegian School of Economics. He has authored and co-authored several books and papers in research publications. His main area of research has been the labour market, financial crashes and crises, and general macroeconomic history. He has served as special adviser to the Norwegian central bank and as editor of the Scandinavian Economic History Review. Grytten has also been Visiting Professor at several universities, among them the London School of Economics and Political Science, the University of Groningen and the Memorial University of Newfoundland.

Arngrim Hunnes received his doctorate in economics (Dr.sc.oec) from the Norwegian School of Economics in 2007, where he also became Assistant Professor. In 2009, he was appointed Associate Professor of Economics at the University of Agder (Kristiansand and Grimstad). Hunnes has previously published research in empirical labour economics, but in recent years has turned to teaching and research in economic history.

Concepción García-Iglesias is a Researcher in Economic History at the University of Helsinki, Finland. In 2009, she was appointed Docent in the Department of Social Science History. Her research centres on monetary and financial history with particular interest in economic growth and transmissions of international business cycles. Dr Garcia-Iglesias holds a Ph.D. in Economics from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and has previously taught at Pompeu Fabra University in Barcelona. She was also an adjunct faculty member at the Helsinki School of Economics within the International MBA Programme.

Juha Kilponen is Senior Economic Advisor at the European Financial Stability Facility in Luxembourg (currently on leave from his position as Research Advisor at the Monetary Policy and Research Department at the Bank of Finland). He is a Docent in Macroeconomics at the University of Turku, Finland, and has taught Macroeconomics at the Finnish Postgraduate Programme in Economics in Helsinki. His research ranges from optimal monetary policy to fiscal policy and labour market dynamics in dynamic general equilibrium macroeconomic models. Dr Kilponen holds a PhD in Economics from the European University Institute in Florence and has held visiting positions at Cass Business School, London, and the European Central Bank, Frankfurt.

Pilar Nogues-Marco is Assistant Professor in Economic History at the Universidad Carlos III de Madrid. Her research interest focuses on monetary and financial history. Pilar wrote her PhD dissertation in International Finance at L’Institute d’Études Politiques (Paris) and the Universitat de Barcelona, and was awarded the Extraordinary Prize of Doctorate (UB, 2011) and the Larruga Prize for the best dissertation (AEHE, 2011), and short-listed for the Gerschenkron Prize (EHA, 2010). She also was awarded the Carande Prize for the best article in RHE (AEHE, 2002) and Figuerola Prize for the best article in EREH (with Camila VanMalle, EHES, 2009).

Anders Ögren is Associate Professor at UCBH, the Department of Economic History, Uppsala University, Associated Researcher at EconomiX, Université Paris Ouest, and Lecturer at Sciences Po in Paris. His most recent books are Convergence and Divergence of National Financial Systems: Evidence from the Gold Standards, 1871–1971 (editor with Patrice Baubeau) and The Swedish Financial Revolution (editor) both published in 2010. He has also published in international journals such as Business History, Explorations in Economic History and Financial History Review.

Lars Fredrik Øksendal is a researcher affiliated with the Norwegian School of Economics and is currently involved in Norges Bank’s bicentenary project (1816–2016). He has published extensively on Norwegian monetary and financial history in journals such as the Financial History Review, International History Review, Contemporary European History and the Review of International Political Economy.

Angela Rojas Rivera is Assistant Professor of the Economics Department at the Universidad de Antioquia, Colombia. Her main research interest lies in pro-development institutional design, which has driven her towards political economics, economic history and development. She is also a PhD candidate of the Economics Department at the University of Warwick, UK, and was a Fulbright scholar at the University of Kansas, USA. She undertook her MA in Economics. Among her publications are ‘Cliometrics: A Market Account of a Scientific Community (1957–2005)’ (Universidad de Antioquia, 2007), and ‘Economic Policy and Institutional Change: A Context-Specific Model for explaining the Economic Reform Failure in 1970s Colombia’ (Universidad de Antioquia, 2006).

Elena Martínez Ruiz is Assistant Professor in the Economics and Economic History Department at the University of Alcalá (Madrid). She holds a PhD in Economics (2000) from the University of Alcalá. In 2001, she won the Prize for Young Scholars for an outstanding work in the field of banking history, awarded by the European Association for Banking History. Her research is focused on economic policy in Spain.
during the twentieth century, especially on monetary and commercial policy during the Francoist era and the Civil War years (1936–39).

Stefano Ugolini holds a PhD in Economics from L’Institute d’Études Politiques (Paris) and a PhD in Humanities from Scuola Normale Superiore (Pisa). Published in international journals and referred books, his works cover different topics in economic history, including the emergence of modern central banking, the structural evolution of money markets, and financial development. Currently a researcher at Scuola Normale Superiore, he collaborates with the Bank of Norway in the context of the Norges Bank Bicentenary Project.

Herman Van der Wee is Professor Emeritus of Social and Economic History at Leuven University (Belgium). He has been a research fellow at several international institutes of advanced study, has lectured at universities worldwide, is a member of four Academies of Sciences and Honorary President of the International Economic History Association. He has published widely on the European economy of the Late Middle Ages and Early Modern Period and on General Economic History, in particular on banking, monetary and financial history of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. His most recent publication is A Small Nation in the Turmoil of the Second World War. Money, Finance and Occupation, Belgium, 1939–1945 (Leuven University Press, 2009).
