Local Memories in a Nationalizing and Globalizing World
This page intentionally left blank
Local Memories in a Nationalizing and Globalizing World

Edited by

Marnix Beyen
Senior Lecturer in Modern Political History, University of Antwerp, Belgium and

Brecht Deseure
Postdoctoral researcher, Vrije Universiteit Brussel (VUB), Belgium
Contents

List of Illustrations vii
Notes on Contributors viii

1 Introduction: Local, National, Transnational Memories: A Triangular Relationship 1
Marnix Beyen

Part I The Politics of Urban Memory

2 Physical Space, Urban Space, Civic Space: Rotterdam’s Inhabitants and their Appropriation of the City’s Past 27
Willem Frijhoff

3 The Politics of Street Names: Local, National, Transnational Budapest 51
Emilia Palonen

4 Transfer Zones: German and Global Suffering in Dresden 72
Mathias Berek

5 Manufacturing Local Identification Behind the Iron Curtain in Sevastopol after the Second World War 94
Karl D. Qualls

6 The Local Past in a Contested Borderland: Commemoration in Strasbourg Between France, Germany and Europe 115
Thomas Williams

Part II Places and Practices of Subaltern Memory

7 Displacements and Hidden Histories: Museums, Locality and the British Memory of the Transatlantic Slave Trade 139
Geoffrey Cubitt

8 Structures of Collective Memory: The Last Bannerman in Local Japan 162
Michael Wert

9 Remembering Father Cícero: Local, Regional and National Memory in North-eastern Brazil 180
Gerald Greenfield
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Chapter</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Pages</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>10</td>
<td>‘Reconciliation across the Graves’? The German War Cemetery at Ysselsteyn as a Place of Remembrance between Local and (Inter)national Areas of Conflict 1945–2000</td>
<td>200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Christine Gundermann</td>
<td>200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11</td>
<td>Local and Counter-Memories of Socialism in Post-Socialist Romania</td>
<td>221</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Duncan Light and Craig Young</td>
<td>221</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12</td>
<td>Greetings from Borgerokko: An Antwerp Neighbourhood as a National Icon of Globalization and Anti-globalism</td>
<td>244</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Marnix Beyen</td>
<td>244</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>13</td>
<td>Memories on the Move: The Italian Student Movement of 1977 between Local, National and Global Memories of Protest</td>
<td>258</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Andrea Hajek</td>
<td>258</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Index 277
List of Illustrations

2.1 A projection in 2007 of the Rotterdam ‘Brandgrens’ of 1940, commissioned by Rotterdam Festivals and conceived by Mothership, Rotterdam 41

3.1 Number of street namings per year in Budapest, 1989–2011 62

4.1 A sticker anonymously produced and spread by an anti-fascist group or individuals in Dresden and other cities around 2007 82

5.1 Sevastopol’s first monument, erected in 1839, to honour Captain A.I. Kazarskii’s miraculous defeat of the Turkish fleet ten years earlier 103

5.2 ‘There are Sausages. And there are KAMO Sausages’, set on a background showing Sevastopol’s Monument to Scuttled Ships 107

5.3 The Monument to Scuttled Ships, Sevastopol’s most beloved monument 108

6.1 The statue of the young Goethe, inaugurated in May 1904, on a square in front of Strasbourg University 119

6.2 The re-inauguration of the Kléber monument, 1945 125

6.3 Monument aux morts, Strasbourg 127

9.1 The giant statue of Padre Cícero in Juazeiro do Norte 183

10.1 German war cemetery Ysselsteyn 204

10.2 War monument in Venray, designed by Karel Lücker and raised in 1949 205

11.1 Bust of Emil Bodnaraş in Iaslovaţ 236

11.2 Nicolae Ceauşescu’s grave in Bucharest 237

13.1 A glass plate in Bologna covering the bullet holes left by a police officer who shot dead left-wing student Francesco Lorusso 259

13.2 The unauthorized marble plaque commemorating Lorusso on a wall near the spot where he had been shot, in Via Mascarella, Bologna 262
Mathias Berek received his PhD in the Study of Culture (Universität Leipzig) for his work on collective memory and reality construction, published in 2009: ‘Kollektives Gedächtnis und die gesellschaftliche Konstruktion der Wirklichkeit. Eine Theorie der Erinnerungskulturen’ (Collective Memory and the Social Construction of Reality: A Theory of Memory Cultures). Currently, he is conducting a DFG-funded research project on the reception of German-Jewish philosopher Moritz Lazarus (Universität Leipzig and Tel-Aviv University). He is one of the editors of the journal for Jewish life in research and education, Medaon.

Marnix Beyen is a Senior Lecturer at the University of Antwerp, Belgium. His research focuses on the cultural representation of nations and the history of parliamentary cultures in Modern Western Europe. With Maarten Van Ginderachter, he co-edited the book Nationhood from Below: Europe in the Long Nineteenth Century (Palgrave, 2012).

Geoffrey Cubitt is a Reader in the Department of History at the University of York, and a member of that university’s Institute for the Public Understanding of the Past (IPUP). His research interests embrace issues of history and memory, commemoration, heroic reputations, and the public uses of the past both in past societies and in the contemporary world. He is the author of The Jesuit Myth: Conspiracy Theory and Politics in Nineteenth-Century France (1993) and of History and Memory (2007), and editor of Imagining Nations (1998), Heroic Reputations and Exemplary Lives (with Allen Warren, 2000), and Representing Enslavement and Abolition in Museums: Ambiguous Engagements (with Laurajane Smith, Ross Wilson and Kalliopi Fouseki, 2011). The last of these volumes arose from the 1807 Commemorated project, analysing museum representations of slavery and abolition around the Bicentenary of the 1807 British Act of Abolition, of which he was Co-Investigator.

Brecht Deseure is a postdoctoral researcher at the Universität Passau and the Vrije Universiteit Brussel, Belgium. He is a specialist in the politics of history in revolutionary and Napoleonic France. His current research focuses on the genesis and reception of modern constitutions in nineteenth-century Europe.
Willem Frijhoff obtained his PhD (social sciences) in 1981 at Tilburg University, and was awarded an honorary doctorate at the University of Mons-Hainaut in 1998. In 1983–1997 he was professor of cultural history and history of mentalities of pre-industrial societies at Erasmus University, Rotterdam, and in 1997–2007 professor of early modern history at the Free University (VU), Amsterdam. Since 2003 he has chaired the ‘Cultural Dynamics’ research programme of the Dutch National Research Organization (NWO). After his formal retirement in 2007 he was made visiting professor at Antwerp University, Radboud University Nijmegen, and Erasmus University Rotterdam. He is the 2011 recipient of the Descartes-Huygens Award for Franco-Dutch Scientific Cooperation. Publications in English include a synthesis on Dutch culture in the Golden Age 1650: Hard-Won Unity (2004), and Fulfilling God’s Mission: The Two Worlds of Dominie Everardus Bogardus 1607–1647 (2007). He co-edited Four Centuries of Dutch-American Relations (2009), and Myth in History, History in Myth (2009). He is currently preparing a monograph on the early modern Franco-Dutch network around the Eelkens merchant family, provisionally titled A Different Golden Age.

Gerald M. Greenfield is Emeritus Professor of History at University of Wisconsin Parkside, where he also served as a senior academic administrator. His research focuses on the Brazilian Northeast, a region prone to devastating droughts, typically portrayed as ‘backward’ and tradition-bound. He is the author of The Realities of Images: Imperial Brazil and the Great Drought (2001), has edited or co-edited several books that focus on Latin America, and his articles have appeared in scholarly journals in the United States, Europe, and Latin America. Informed by memory studies, his recent work has focused on Father Cícero Romão Batista (1844–1934), the subject of his chapter in this volume, who remains an iconic figure in contemporary Brazil. He currently is writing a monograph that centres on regionalism and ‘popular’ or ‘folk’ Catholicism as key factors in (re)appraisals of Father Cícero’s life and legacy.

Christine Gundermann is Professor of Public History at the University of Cologne. She studied history, ethics and philosophy in Halle/Saale and the Erasmus University in Rotterdam from 1998 to 2005. From 2005 to 2013 she worked at the Freie Universität Berlin as a teaching and research assistant at the chair of Univ.-Prof. Paul Nolte, Modern History/Contemporary History. Her thesis was on the relevance of memories of the Second World War in Dutch–German encounters.

Andrea Hajek is a British Academy Postdoctoral Fellow at the University of Glasgow, where she works on collective memories of Italian second-wave feminism in and since the 1970s. She obtained her doctorate in 2010 from the University of Warwick, UK. Her dissertation was on the negotiation of public memories of protest in 1970s Italy and has been published in the Memory Studies Series at Palgrave Macmillan as Negotiating Memories of Protest in Western Europe (2013). She is the Senior Editorial Assistant for the journal Memory Studies, and she is a founding member of the Warwick Oral History Network. Her research interests include collective and cultural memory, social movements, gender, oral history, digital and visual memories, terrorism in history education and media, cinema and collective trauma. She has published articles in a number of peer reviewed journals and in an edited volume, and she has (co-)edited two special issues.

Duncan Light is Visiting Research Fellow, School of Science and the Environment, Manchester Metropolitan University. A cultural geographer by background, his current research explores the relationships between urban landscape, memory and identity in post-socialist Romania. He has published widely on this topic in journals such as Europe-Asia Studies, Journal of Historical Geography, Transactions of the Association of British Geographers and Annals of the Association of American Geographers.

Emilia Palonen works as a researcher at the University of Helsinki. She obtained her PhD in Ideology and Discourse Analysis at the University of Essex, with a dissertation titled ‘Reading Budapest: Polarization in Contemporary Hungarian Politics’. Her current research interests include identifications and community-building, poststructuralist discourse theory, space and centre-periphery relations.

Karl Qualls is Professor of History at Dickinson College (USA). He has received research grants from the Getty Research Institute, ACLS, Library of Congress, National Council for Eurasian and East European Research, IREX, Kennan Institute, and Howard Foundation, among others. He is author of several articles, chapters, and of From Ruins to Reconstruction: Identity and Urban Rebirth in Soviet Sevastopol after World War II (2009), focused on state-society and centre–periphery relations in the reconstruction of Sevastopol after World War II. Karl is publishing articles about children who fled the Spanish Civil War and were raised in the Soviet Union.

Michael Wert is an Associate Professor of East Asian History at Marquette University. He is a specialist in early modern and modern Japanese history but also writes and teaches about East Asian and World history. He is the author of Meiji Restoration Losers: Memory and Tokugawa Supporters in Modern Japan (2103).

Tom Williams is Assistant Lecturer in German at the University of Valenciennes. He completed a doctorate in history at the University of Oxford in 2011 and has held visiting postdoctoral fellowships at the Institute of European History in Mainz (funded by the Alfred Toepfer Stiftung F.V.S.) and at the Université Libre de Bruxelles (funded by the Fondation Wiener-Anspach). His doctoral research examined the shifting political uses of the past in the Franco-German border regions of Alsace and Baden during the mid-twentieth century. He is currently writing a book on the experience and memory of Nazism, war and post-war reconstruction in Alsace and undertaking research on German and Allied soldiers’ experiences of travel and ‘tourism’ in Western Europe during the Second World War.

Craig Young is a Human Geographer working at the School of Science and the Environment at the Metropolitan University of Manchester. His research and teaching interests concern processes of urban change, with a special interest for issues of cultural identity in post-socialist cities in former Eastern Europe.