Immigrants and Minorities, Politics and Policy

For further volumes:
http://www.springer.com/series/8832
Wanted and Welcome?

Policies for Highly Skilled Immigrants in Comparative Perspective
Acknowledgments

This book has its origins in a workshop on highly skilled immigration policy, hosted by the University of Toronto’s School of Public Policy and Governance on 8 February 2008. I thank the SPPG’s Director, Professor Mark Stabile, for generously providing funding for the event. I also thank the event’s co-sponsors, the Department of Political Science, the Centre for the Study of the United States, the Centre for European, Russian, and Eurasian Studies, and Professor Randall Hansen, the Canada Research Chair for Immigration and Governance, for their support. I am grateful for the support of the SSHRC-funded Major Collaborative Research Initiative on Ethnicity and Democratic Governance. Both the SPPG and the EDG provided generous funding for research assistance, without which this book could not have been completed. Special thanks go to all the research assistants who worked so hard on this book: Gabriel Eidelman, Sonja Friesel, Satinder Klair, Inder Marwah, Kelsey Norman, and Natalie Rasso. I also thank Professor David Leal for his work as a contributor, series editor, and supporter of the project (thanks also to the staff and students at the University of Texas Austin who helped with copyediting). I am very grateful to all the authors who contributed such high quality chapters. What was their patience during an overly long publication process (for which I take full responsibility) is very much appreciated. I thank my hosts at the Hertie School of Governance for providing such a genial environment to complete work on this book. The school’s faculty, students, and staff have made me feel both wanted and welcome and for that I am very grateful. I appreciate the patience and support of Jon Gurstelle and Kevin Halligan at Springer. An editor could not wish for a better group of institutional supporters, contributors, and editor/publishers.

I dedicate this book to the memory of my friend Peter Benda, who passed away much too early as I was completing work on this manuscript. I came to know Peter while I was a graduate student assistant at the International Centre for Migration, Ethnicity, and Citizenship at the New School for Social Research. Peter was the Associate Director of ICMEC, working alongside its Director Aristide Zolberg to provide a meeting point for migration-related research serving students and scholars in the New York City region and beyond. Peter took ICMEC’s commitment to graduate education very seriously and I and many other students benefited greatly from his efforts. In working alongside Peter, many of us also learned important lessons about character and personal integrity. Through his actions, Peter demonstrated that generosity, humanity, kindness, and a deep commitment to scholarly excellence were not only complementary but also the qualities of a truly excellent leader. Peter was loved, never feared, and deeply respected. I was very lucky to have had Peter as a friend after we both left the New School. I am going to miss him dearly and know the same will be true for the many people he touched so profoundly.

Berlin, October 2012
Contents

1 Introduction ................................. 1
Triadafilos Triadafilopoulos and Craig Damian Smith

Part I  Origins

2 Dismantling White Canada: Race, Rights, and the Origins of the Points System  ........ 15
Triadafilos Triadafilopoulos

3 Creating Multicultural Australia: Local, Global and Trans-National Contexts for the Creation of a Universal Admissions Scheme, 1945–1983  .................. 39
Gwenda Tavan

4 Re-Forming the Gates: Postwar Immigration Policy in the United States Through the Hart-Celler Act of 1965  ................. 61
Philip E. Wolgin

Part II  Still the Leader? Highly Skilled Immigration Policy in the United States

5 Talent Matters: Immigration Policy-Setting as a Competitive Scramble Among Jurisdictions  .................... 85
Ayelet Shachar

6 Skilled Immigration Policy in the United States: Does Policy Admit “Enough” Skilled Workers?  .................. 105
B. Lindsay Lowell
7  Pointless: On the Failure to Adopt an Immigration Points System in the United States ............................. 123
Gary P. Freeman, David L. Leal and Jake Onyett

Part III  The Challenge of Integrating Highly Skilled Immigrants in Canada

8  Closing the Gaps Between Skilled Immigration and Canadian Labor Markets: Emerging Policy Issues and Priorities ............. 147
Jeffrey G. Reitz

9  Accreditation and the Labor Market Integration of Internationally Trained Engineers and Physicians in Canada ..................... 165
Monica Boyd

10 Integrating International Medical Graduates: The Canadian Approach to the Brain Waste Problem ............................. 199
Ivy Lynn Bourgeault and Elena Neiterman

11 Skilled Enough? Employment Outcomes for Recent Economic Migrants in Canada Compared to Australia ..................... 219
Lesleyanne Hawthorne

Part IV  The Politics of Highly Skilled Immigration Policy in Britain and Germany

Will Somerville

13 Germany: Reluctant Steps Towards a System of Selective Immigration ................................................ 273
Karen Schönwälder

14 Wasting Newcomers’ Human Capital? Cultural Capital and the Integration of Skilled Migrants into the British and German Labor Markets .................................................. 287
Oliver Schmidtke

Notes on Contributors .................................................. 305