A variety of sports-related risk factors are poised to threaten the oral health of athletes. It is therefore fundamental to identify them and increase awareness of both the sporting population and health professionals alike.